The Year 1932

The year 1932 A. D., is a leap year of 366 days. Of the Jewish era it is the 5,693rd after the creation of the world. Of the Mohammedan era it is the 1,351st since the flight of Mohammed. Since the Reformation by Dr. Martin Luther it is the 415th, and since the beginning of American Independence it is the 156th.

Time

The time given in this Year Book is that of St. Louis (38° 38' North Latitude and 90° 15' West Longitude, Central Standard Time). Eastern Time is one hour earlier, Mountain Time is one, and Pacific Time two hours later. The figures given for the rising and setting of the sun and moon are reckoned for the 40th degree of Latitude.

The Seasons

Spring begins March 20th, 1.54 P. M.; summer, June 21st, 9.23 A. M.; autumn, September 23rd, 12.16 A. M.; winter, December 21st, 7.15 P. M.

Eclipses

During the year 1932 there will be two eclipses of the sun and two of the moon.

1. An annular eclipse of the sun on March 7th, visible in Australia and the islands to the north.
2. A partial eclipse of the moon on March 22nd, visible in North America (except the northeastern section), Pacific Ocean, Asia, and Australia (3.50 to 9.06 A. M. St. Louis time).
3. A total eclipse of the sun on August 31st, visible in Maine and Eastern Canada; partial eclipse visible in North America, northern part of South America, and Northeastern Asia (11.45 A. M. to 4.22 P. M.)
4. A partial eclipse of the moon on September 14th, visible in Europe, Africa, and the northern part of North America.

A New Picture of George Washington

The front-view picture of George Washington is so familiar to everybody that it will not be easy to recognize the same face in the new picture which appears on the cover page. It is rather surprising that this bust of Washington, made by one of the best known artists of the day, is so little known, and it is greatly to the credit of the George Washington Bi-centennial Commission, which is sponsoring the nation-wide celebration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of the Father of his country, that they have chosen this bust picture as the subject for the official Washington portrait to be distributed over the country in connection with the celebration.

The bust was made at Mt. Vernon, soon after the close of the War for Independence, by Jean Antoine Houdon (1741-1828), who made a series of 200 busts of prominent people of his day which, as a collection, forms one of the monuments of world art. Born as the son of a domestic in the employ of a courtier, Houdon rose to be an outstanding figure in the history of French culture. Besides his bust of Washington, Houdon also made busts of Benjamin Franklin and John Marshall.

The circumstances of Houdon's selection to execute a likeness of Washington are themselves an interesting page in American history. On June 22, 1784, the year after the successful close of the Revolution, the Legislature of Virginia resolved "that measures be taken for procuring a statue of General Washington, of the finest marble and best workmanship." After much consultation, in which Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin took an active part, Houdon, already at the height of his fame, was selected as incomparably the most reliable and proficient artist.

Washington himself has left a record in his Diaries of Houdon's stay at Mount Vernon for the purpose of modeling this bust from close observation and measurement of Washington's features and figure. Houdon also made a life-mask of Washington, for correction of the bust. Both mask and bust served as models for the statue of Washington by Houdon ordered by the State of Virginia and later erected in Richmond. The original bust was presented by Houdon to Washington and has been seen by every visitor to Mount Vernon.

One especially interesting circumstance accounts for the life which Houdon imparted to Washington's head. During the artist's visit at Mount Vernon, Washington had occasion to decline with some indignation a shady bargain offered him by a horsedealer. The passing mood impressed Houdon as so characteristic of the man that he immortalized it in his bust. The result, in the opinion of critics, is to give the likeness striking vigor and power.

Being modeled from Washington's living figure, this bust has every guarantee of absolute accuracy in presenting Washington in the prime of life and is beyond question a great artistic masterpiece in every respect. The bust also permits of being photographed from several angles, thus providing a variety of artistic and authentic portraits.

SALVAGE*

BY LYDIA BECK SMITH

How could one think that loneliness and sadness cast shadows about Marzelle's pretty cottage?

Those shadows that danced on new shoots of grass beneath the lilacs were not sad. The silhouettes of tulips that lay along the borders, of narcissus and jonquil by the fence were happy shadows. That grey twin that hopped at the feet of a fat robin on the lawn was as eager and joyful as the robin himself. The soft lace spring sunshine that wove through the fancy half-grown maple leaves was lovely in its pleasant promise of summer shade.

Where did one discover sadness or loneliness about a white cottage with bravely ruffled curtains at the windows, vines of wistaria and Dorothy Perkins coming to life on trellis and portico in the potent warmth of this fragrant afternoon? Surely one could not have seen it if one had not known.

Marzelle had lived in the cottage only five years. The people in the village nearby and her neighbors on the highway knew little of what her life had been before she came among them. They knew that her husband had been killed in some tragic way many years before, that she had lost her son in the World War.

They had found her kind and generous and willing to share in the social and civic life of the little community. She had grown into their hearts, engendering love with pity, giving affection and understanding, but remaining reticent. So they were aware that brightness did not fill every corner of her house.

The stranger could not have perceived it this afternoon, I think, until he saw Marzelle herself saunter down the walk to the gate between the lilacs. She leaned tiredly upon the friendly gate, a hand supporting her face. Not old, but wearyin' for someone. Her abundant white hair held its youthful vigor. Her dark grey eyes behind thick lashes still were full of dreams. The sweet mouth that was wistful as she gazed up the highway must have needed the kisses of children.

As her look travelled down that straight, smooth, unromantic pavement, she frowned at what a fast road it was! The cars spun by her so swiftly, impersonally. She hadn't time to see their occupants. So different from the beat of hoofs and leisurely passing of buggies and carriages that must one day have gone over a white turnpike here.

Two cars came into view like comets, madly racing, cavorting, zig-zagging crazily. What could they be doing? She leaned across the gate.

Like pulsing demons they shot towards her. Purposely, it seemed to her, the larger car crowded the roadster over a ten foot embankment at the side of the highway two hundred yards from where she stood. It careened out of sight while Marzelle held her breath. There was a terrible screeching of brakes and a long skid before the big car could stop. Then she heard excited voices. Two men leaped out, found a path and ran below, returning with some heavy boxlike object, which they loaded into their machine. Then they turned and were speeding back the way they had come before Marzelle realized what had happened.

There must have been a driver in the wrecked machine! Had they left him so?

She ran toward the spot where it had occurred, speeding down the path to the lower level.

Piled against a rock fence rimless wheels and twisted iron lay as if not yet quite lifeless. Marzelle's eye was caught by a stain that spread on the ground from the rear.

At the side of the car she saw a man's feet moving. Not dead then, but horribly buried. Frantically she called, pulled at his feet, tried to lift the car. No sound came, not even a groan.

She ran back up the path to hail some passing car. When before had there been so long a time without one passerby?

Then all at once there was a line of parked cars, a small curious crowd about wreckage against the fence.

Marzelle heard them say that the stain on the ground was liquor, she heard the words "rum runner," "outlaw," "bootlegger," "renegade."

She saw a boy's white unconscious face, a boy's limp body lying friendless on the ground.

Marzelle had had a son.

She made them take him to her cottage. She turned back fresh linen sheets, patted a place for his grimy head on a spotless downy pillow.

"Oh, Lady, we can't put him there, a fellow like him. You're excited!" exclaimed one of the men.

Marzelle's eyes were steady steel. "If he ever needed a good bed, it is now."

The two village doctors began their work. Marzelle stood by with towels, bandages, hot water. A practical nurse from the crowd in the yard offered her services.

A broken leg, a broken arm and collar bone and two dislocated fingers were the only injuries immediately discoverable, except some cuts and bruises. The state of unconsciousness might or might not mean some more serious injury.

Completing his investigation of the skull, Dr. Hemingway pushed back the heavy brown hair, which lay in crisp waves. "I'd call that skull fairly well protected," observed the doctor, giving the hair an extra stroke, "looks like a nice boy gone very wrong."

Marzelle laid her hand on the forehead.

A shiver ran through the boy's long limbs, travelled up the body to the face and ended in a flutter of eyelids.

Marzelle looked at the doctors in quick apprehension.

They watched him, for the moment waiting.

He opened his eyes, looked from one face to another, allowed his look to rest upon the fact of Marzelle. Then he closed his eyes and remained quite still.

"Any pain?" Dr. Hemingway leaned over him.

If he heard, he made no sign.

The drawing of his white lips indicated that he suffered.

By the time the doctors had finished, Marzelle had had pajamas brought from the village and they left him cleanly and neatly bandaged in her dainty guest room.

"It is preposterous, Mrs. Custer, for you to talk of keeping this fellow here. Evidently he was in bad business. A gun and traces of liquor were found in his car. I consider him an unsafe person to have in your house."

"With all those broken bones, you consider him unsafe?" Marzelle smiled peculiarly.

"Broken bones are not always sufficient handicap for a desperate man. Shan't I call an ambulance from the city and have him taken to a hospital?" He almost plead with her.

"No." She remained firm.

"But why? Why should you do this?"

Marzelle was a little embarrassed, but her eyes held true. "I am lonely. If he is a bad boy, he needs good mothering."

Dr. Hemingway said no more.

In the days that followed the most he could do was to see that she kept a nurse, was not left in the house alone. Because his misgivings about his patient increased.

He was sure the boy was feigning deafness and the loss of speech. He did not like his sullen, bitter moods.

Marzelle was an angel of mercy around his bed, yet he never gave her one look of gratitude or fondness. It seemed sometimes as if a storm gathered in his dark eyes as he watched her, but never a look of questioning or pleasure or hope arose from their depths.

Marzelle grew thin as the weeks passed by. She sat under the wistaria, which was blooming now, and wept at the futility of her efforts to reach his heart. Oh, why was he unmoved at the flowers she brought each day, the choice dishes, pictures? Was there nothing she might find to arouse his interest?

Silent, nameless, he let the days drift over him. Not even an initial or telltale laundry mark had been found on his clothing. He could not write with a broken right arm, bandaged fingers on his left hand. He could not, or would not, speak or hear.

Trying to analyze, wishing with all her strength to understand him, Marzelle remembered two occasions when she had surprised fear on his countenance. Fear! Of course. The boy was afraid, guilty of some misdemeanor, maybe criminal, maybe not serious, if one understood all about it. This was no time for her to give up in despair. She was his only friend. They called him ugly names in the village. She had heard. "Mrs. Custer's piece of wreckage," "salvage." She must stand by.

Dr. Hemingway stopped at the gate. Marzelle went down the walk to meet him, fresh courage enlivening her.

"Well, how is our scrap iron?" The doctor laughed.

Marzelle winced at his reference to the boy.

"I can't see very rapid improvement, but he'll be all right in time. You'll see!"

"Hasn't regained speech or hearing?" He half-jested.

"Not seemingly."

"I think, Mrs. Custer, he must be keeping silent for the very logical reason that he doesn't want to talk."

"Or is afraid to talk," she suggested. "Is there any cause for arrest in what was found in his car?"

"Hardly. The gun was carried unconcealed probably. There was whiskey on the ground, excellent evidence, if more could have been found; merely circumstantial as the case stands."

Like a flash Marzelle remembered two men hurrying away with a heavy case, but she did not tell the doctor.

"The authorities, of course, are watching him. He may be wanted somewhere," he went on. "That is why I hate to see you give yourself so completely to this task. It may mean great pain for you in the end, after all."

Her eyes filled with tears. "But Dr. Hemingway, if he should have ahead of him years in prison, even an electric chair, don't you see how sweet the memory of a home will be to him? He is just a boy."

He patted her shoulder. "I am not capable of meeting your arguments, Mrs. Custer. We speak of different things. I am talking of a criminal; you of a homeless boy."

"After all, he may be only that."

The doctor sighed. "For your sake, I pray God that he is," he said with real emotion.

Marzelle's heart warmed at seeing a quick look of relief flit across the boy's face when he saw her accompanying the doctor.

He remained quietly masked while the doctor felt his bandages, pleasantly took his temperature. Dr. Hemingway told jokes, tried to tease his patient, to cajole just one twitch of a lip from him, but the boy stared at him from his pillow like the sphynx.

Mopping his forehead in the hall, the doctor told Marzelle, "I never saw such self-control in my life."

She laughed. "Weeks of practise help."

"I never saw anything like it. But he is mending gratifyingly."

Marzelle returned to the bed and stood smiling down at her charge, brushing back his hair.

Quickly he closed his eyes against the tenderness in hers, always on guard even with her.

That afternoon Marzelle visited the attic in search of some boyish thing that might arouse his interest.

She entered his room with a child's table under one arm and a large box under the other. She excused the nurse and asked to be left alone with him for an hour.

She unfolded that little table and set it conveniently across his body on the bed. Then she began to take toys from the box. Hiding the pain in her heart, with cheerful fortitude she set a little dog with chewed ears and a missing eye near the broken arm on the covers. A worn story book she laid by its side. His eyes followed her movements, puzzled.

Then she unsnapped the lid of a jack-in-the-box, a comical head popped up—

And the boy smiled!

Marzelle laughed, making it quite natural, and began instantly to make a tower of blocks on the table. She dared not risk a second effort of the jack-in-the-box. The boy must not realize that he had smiled. She felt that she had won a victory; made a beginning at last.

She showed him how to use the thumb and little finger of his left hand to hold a block so that he could build towers for himself.

Carefully he tried, but time after time his awkward bandaged fingers destroyed his structure. He shook his head in disgust.

Then Marzelle selected blocks with certain letter and spelt for him REBUILD.

Glancing up at her, he saw that she meant more than a block house, and she meant to help him rebuild with her own courage and strength and resolution. His face became a dull red and she knew he would think it over.

So she patted his hand, jumbled the blocks again on the table and left him to his thoughts.

After that he kept his blocks always with him, making houses, making words.

One day he spelled for her AM I WANTED. HERE, she asked.

OFFICERS he spelled, embarrassed.

She leaned near his ear and spoke to him. "They have no reason to want you. The only evidence they found was a stain on the ground. I saw two men from the other car take a heavy box away with them. Nobody else in the world saw them or knows of it."

"Thank God," he barely whispered.

"Is that all?" she queried.

"All?" He did not understand.

"All they could want you for?"

"That was enough," he whispered, smiling. "Complications involved."

"Shall you regain the power of speech?" Marzelle was smiling too.

"Not so suddenly. Hearing first."

So he began to hear and to talk. Dr. Hemingway himself was amused.

Marzelle spent hours of every day reading to him. She began with "Miss Minerva and William Greenhill" and "Billy and the Major." Then she read "Peter Pan". And when she was ashamed for him to see her moist eyes at the closing chapter she found his eyes swimming too in tears. She read "Tom Sawyer," Bret Hart stories, some of Dickens and at night she came to read him a chapter from the little gilt-edged Bible always kept on the guest room table. She seemed to select the chapters at random. He did not know she had prayed and sought guidance in the choice of them.

It was midsummer, the garden wearing its loveliest dress, when the nurse was discharged and the boy could walk about the yard with his crutches.

Marzelle usually was at his elbow. They were reading "Ben Hur" now, existing on a height of beautiful truth and romance attained only through the pages of "Ben Hur".

Marzelle called him "Elliston". It was the only name he would give her. He called her "Milady".

Late one afternoon she helped him painstakingly down the highway to the scene of the wreck. With the utmost care they descended the little path to the place where the fence still bore evidences of the impact.

"Nothing left of the little old auto but scrap iron, I guess," he deprecated.

"I had it removed, Elliston. I didn't want you to see it. I fancied you loved it."

"She was a brave boat," his voice was husky. "Well, the loss of her—saved me."

"Saved me"—In two words he repaid Marzelle for her struggle.

He eased himself down on the ground. Marzelle sat down, not speaking.

"I was delivering a case of liquor, Milady. You deserve to know. Those were gangsters who wrecked me and stole it from me. What a kindness they did me!"

"God's hand was in it, my boy, I feel. I know that he sent you to me."

"And you took me from a heap of debris into your Heaven-place just in time. I was on a sleek track, Milady. You see, two years ago I left college and fell in with a bad gang."

"Have you no home, Elliston?" Marzelle asked the question sadly, thinking of her cottage when he should go away.

"No home—whatever."

"No mother, Child?"

"I dislike"—His lips grew hard—"No mother".

Marzelle was uneasy.

He sighed deeply. "Milady"—

"Yes?"

"Nearly three years ago you read of the Channing case "

His father killed, his mother dishonored!

"Not that, my boy! That didn't happen to you!"

"I had to disappear—get away—from the publicity."

"Oh, you poor child!"

Tears streamed down her face, but his eyes were hard.

"I have some money, Milady, hardly and dangerously earned these last two years. I've been thinking I'll go back to college in September."

She dried her face, lighted again with hope and courage.

"But you'll come home to me for Christmas and in the summers"—

"Those toys, Milady? Have you a son?"

"In Flanders." Her low voice told him the story.

"Then you'll take me?"

"I took you when you lay here lifeless and alone that afternoon."

"I mean—I mean you'll keep me? Give me a name?"

"I'll keep you, Elliston, make you legally Elliston Custer."

"You shall never be sorry," he spoke determinedly.

"Of course not. It must make a beautiful spot in God's tapestry when two persons, as needy as you and I, find the needs of each met in the other."

The boy was deeply stirred.

"But let us not put it into words, Milady. Open 'Ben Hur'. Let us read."

The Mount of the Holy Cross*

BY DOWELL LIVESAY

Despite this age of automobiles, one of the great natural attractions of the United States still remains only a name to all but a few people—something heard about but not seen. Despite the fact that millions of Americans each year now rush about on wheels, hunting new scenes and new thrills, this awe-inspiring work of nature remains hidden from their sight.

The Mount of the Holy Cross in Colorado, a triangular peak 13,996 feet in elevation, bearing upon its face a Christian cross two thousand feet high, formed of ravines that are filled almost the year round with snow, is famed the world over. Lifted against the sky in rugged and imposing severity, the mountain with its holy sign presents a spectacle of incomparable grandeur, unique in the astounding size and majesty of its symbol. Legends have grown up about it. From the time of the early Spanish explorers and French fur-traders it has commanded the admiration and veneration of men. It inspired Eugene Field to write an imaginary tale that may be classed as nothing less than a legend truly American in origin. So remarkable is this peak that President Hoover on May 11, 1929, declared it a National Monument in order to throw about it the Federal Government's protection from destruction and defacement. Yet, to all practical purposes, it still stands invisible from the hosts of people of the nation and the world, who some day should like to behold it.

Soon, however, the hidden symbol will be disclosed—a view of the Mount of the Holy Cross will be made accessible for all who care to see it. Plans of the United States Forest Service have been completed with this design, and will be carried out with the cooperation of the State of Colorado. Within a few years, in all probability, the Mount of the Holy Cross will become a religious mecca for many thousands annually and an attraction of great scenic interest for still other thousands.

How this will be done, and how it can be done is a fascinating story, a story of two mountains, two natural phenomena. For the Mount of the Holy Cross can be made visible to large numbers of people only through the aid of another mountain, which, strangely, seems to have been created for that specific purpose. This is Notch Mountain, a phenomenon comparatively unknown to the world, a huge granite ridge directly opposite the Mount of the Holy Cross, so-named because down its very center extends a tremendous V-shaped opening through which the Mount of the Holy Cross may be seen from a certain vantage point several miles distant.

Can you imagine the notch in a rifle-sight magnified a million times, more or less, and sliced down hundreds of feet through the heart of a great mountain? Well, that's the notch in Notch Mountain, and it serves as does a rifle-sight to give a clear view of the sacred symbol on the Mount of the Holy Cross from an eminence called Shrine Pass seven miles away by air-line. Only from this one place, however, does the notch serve that purpose, because the ridge of Notch Mountain itself is 13,500 feet in elevation and hides the Mount of the Holy Cross from all other distant points. What the Federal Government intends to do is to utilize the notch as a natural rifle-sight from that single place on Shrine Pass in order to make the cross visible to the traveling public. With that plan a forest area designated as "The Shrine of the Holy Cross" has been withdrawn from public entry by the Secretary of Agriculture "for recreational and devotional purposes."

Utilization of this natural sighting device is necessary for the reason that there is probably no more rugged terrain in Colorado than that immediately surrounding the Mount of the Holy Cross. The Mount itself is a member of a range of several bare, jagged peaks, all approaching an altitude of fourteen thousand feet above sea-level—the Apostolic Range, it has been called. Flanking this range are rough, high, boulder-strewn ridges, of which Notch Mountain is one. Approach to the foot of the Mount of the Holy Cross is by trail around and up these ridges. An intimate view of the cross may be obtained from the top of Notch Mountain, but this may be reached only by a Forest Service trail built for horse travel, the last mile of which is so narrow, precipitous and rough that it is intended solely for pedestrians and will not accommodate any considerable number of people or horses.

It is a terrain almost entirely above timberline, sparkling with numerous clear lakes in the rocky hollows; fascinating, inspiring, but presenting too strenuous a trip, either by horseback or afoot, for the average visitor. The hazards of altitude, ruggedness, dangerous lightning, snow storms and wind make it an area more adapted to people accustomed to mountain climbing than for use by the masses. During recent years pilgrimages have been held each summer to the top of Notch Mountain under the auspices of the Holy Cross Pilgrimage Association, but only a comparatively few people have been able to participate because of the hardships. The Mount of the Holy Cross, therefore, is practically inaccessible and still truly invisible to ninety-nine percent of the millions of persons who annually go about America, hunting new sights and new thrills. For them the way of seeing it must be made easy.

The Shrine of the Holy Cross, seven miles distant by airline but many more by road and trail, and Notch Mountain will provide that way. Covered with pine and spruce trees, Shrine Pass is a beautiful and comparatively low divide in Holy Cross National Forest, approximately ten thousand feet in elevation. Gentle slopes approach the summit on each side, and construction of automobile roads to the top will not be difficult. From the summit on clear days that part of the Mount of the Holy Cross bearing the sacred sign may be seen in all its natural and inspiring glory.

Plans of the United States Forest Service contemplate development of the Shrine as a community center for religious gatherings and recreation. It will be open to all religious denominations. In a natural bowl, ideal for the purpose, an amphitheater with pulpit and choirloft will be constructed some day. There congregations will be able to hold services beneath the illimitable sky, and, while they worship, gaze upon the snow-symbol of the Christian religion lifted against the blue in the distance. All improvements facing the cross will be for use of all denominations, individually or collectively, under a system to be worked out jointly. And there will be other developments. Permits will be granted to various religious denominations for erection of their own church edifices for indoor services of their members, as some have already expressed a desire to do. Commercialization of the Shrine will not be allowed. Free and available to persons of all beliefs, the Shrine will forever remain dedicated to the finest aspirations and sentiments of man.

Mount of the Holy Cross itself seems to have been protected in the past for that same purpose. The fissures that form the post and arm of its symbol are mineral-bearing, yet they have never been dynamited for the riches within them. Many are the legends that have grown up around the peak, legends of impious miners tempted to seek gold in the holy mountain. Illness has thwarted some, lightning has descended upon others. Blindness, murder, tragedy in all its forms, have followed upon the footsteps of those who have dared tamper with the cross. Since the time white men first saw the symbol, though rich in treasure, it has remained inviolate.

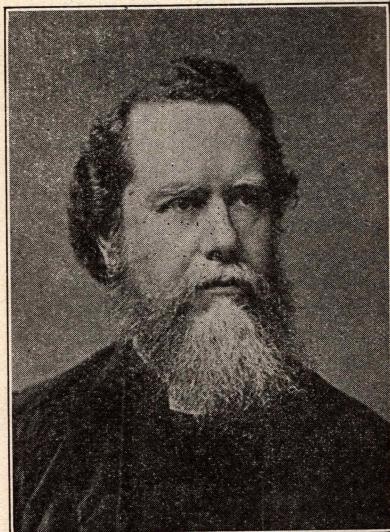

The peak inspired Eugene Field in his Western days. He wrote a tale, "The Holy Cross," which gives the title to one of his volumes of prose. It is a tale of early Spaniards, separated from the army of Cortez, who wandered northward and sought refuge "in the noble mountains of an unknown land." There they came upon an aged and withered man, the Wandering Jew, whom they succored at the behest of their priest. In the tale Field describes the death of the old man after a dream that he was to wander no more. He tells of his burial on the mountainside, a cataclysm that separated the mountain from the others. After that there appeared on the mountain next spring "a mighty cross of snow on which the sun never fell and which no breath of wind ever disturbed." The Spaniards, he wrote, also sleep "among those mighty mountains in the West," and the white, majestic symbol "lies where God's hands had placed it, and its mighty arms stretch forth as in a benediction upon the fleeting dust beneath."

There are also other legends, including one of a priest advised by an angel that he would be forgiven a sin only when he saw the sign of the cross in the heavens. Hearing of the snow cross in the Rocky Mountains, he sought it and came upon it at sunrise one morning just as the first rays touched the peak and the rocks faded into the background of the sky. The sight overcame the priest, and he died with profound joy and peace upon his face.

These legends are expressions of the different ways in which the Mount of the Holy Cross has already appealed to the imagination and sentiment of the American people, although heretofore it has been almost inaccessible.

A highway to the summit of Shrine Pass and down to the little town of Red Cliff will certainly be completed now within a few years.

The completed highway will be known as "The Holy Cross Trail," and that trail will enable the Notch and the Cross to fulfill the purpose for which they seem to have been created—the inspiration of the people.

James Hudson TAYLOR

Founder of the China Inland Mission

1832-1932

No field of Christian work is so replete with remarkable facts, thrilling experiences and convincing evidence of divine guidance as that of missionary endeavor. The more one delves into the records of missionaries' lives, and the manner in which almost any missionary enterprise came into being, prospered and bore fruit, the more surprising is the proof that God himself has had a hand in it, and that boldness of faith in God's promises, self-sacrificing effort in his name and patient perseverance in obedience to his will have their sure reward here and now.

Since China is now so much in the limelight, it may be of interest to consider how one of the outstanding missionary undertakings in that troubled country, the China Inland Mission, grew up, all the more so as the year 1932 brings the centenary of the birth of James Hudson Taylor, the founder of that unique enterprise, so remarkable in many of its features.

MISSIONS IN CHINA 100 YEARS AGO

While there is some evidence to support the tradition that the Apostle Thomas and others preached the Gospel in China, the first definite information as to mission work in that great land comes through the Nestorians, who entered the empire as early as A. D. 505, and there are reliable records proving the widespread activities of these early preachers of the Gospel. Little trace of their work, however, has been left.

During the thirteenth century, the age of the Crusaders, Roman Catholic missionaries set forth upon the long overland journey to the court of Kublai Khan, and John de Monte Corvino translated the whole of the New Testament and the Psalms into the language of the Tartars and cheerfully endured great hardships. But after less than a hundred years the fall of the Mogul dynasty swept Christianity out of China. In 1560, the missionary zeal of the Jesuits took advantage of the Portuguese occupation of Macao, and for 150 years their work enjoyed a measure of prosperity, mingled with periods of bitter persecution, and the names of Xavier, Ricci, Schall and Verbiest represent a heroic zeal for the cause of Christ which, inspite of often questionable methods remains an inspiration—and a reproof to Christendom.

Protestant missions in China did not begin until Robert Morrison sailed for China in 1807, and, in a little more than 25 years, inspite of the East India Company's opposition to missionary work, completed a Chinese-English dictionary, a translation of the whole Bible into Chinese, and established the Anglo-Chinese College at Malacca.

One hundred years ago China was still closed to the Gospel, and the London Missionary Society, under the auspices of which Morrison entered China, had to carry on its work from the Malay Peninsula. During the years 1831-35 Karl Guetzlaff made his remarkable journeys along the coast of China, in Chinese junks and other vessels, which aroused so much interest in England and America and led, indirectly, to the founding of the Chinese Evangelization Society. In order to crush the illegal opium trade fostered by British interests the Chinese destroyed opium valued at nearly $10,000,000, and this brought on the first opium war, as a result of which, in 1841, Hongkong was deeded to the British, and by the Treaty of Nanking the five ports of Canton, Amoy, Shanghai, Ningpo and Foochow were thrown open to trade.

In view of what was thus happening in this vast and populous empire Christian people, particularly in England, were deeply interested in missions for China. In Yorkshire, England, a Methodist local preacher, named Taylor, and his wife wanted to go to China as missionaries, but were prevented from so doing. However, they definitely prayed that if God should give them a son, that son might dedicate his life to that great land. When that son was born, on May 21, 1832, they named him James Hudson, but as the lad grew up their fond hope was never mentioned to him until he had already spent seven years in China. The call, if there was one, must, they felt, come from God himself.

HOW HUDSON TAYLOR FOUND HIS TASK

Brought up amid the helpful influences of a godly home the boy's heart naturally turned toward religious life and work, and at the age of seventeen, after passing through a period of spiritual indifference and even of skepticism, accepted the atoning work of Christ on his behalf. Soon afterward there came to him the call of God for the mission field. With a view to preparing himself for his lifework he engaged as assistant to a physician at Hull, and subsequently studied medicine at the London Hospital, and in September, 1853, before the completion of his medical studies, he offered himself to the Chinese Evangelization Society. The six years from 1854-60 were spent in Shanghai, Swatow and Ningpo, working sometimes with older missionaries of other societies.

In January, 1858, Mr. Taylor was married to Miss Maria Dyer, daughter of one of the early representatives of the London Missionary Society in the Far East, and both gave all their time and strength to evangelistic work, in the midst of much bitter anti-foreign feeling, which at times even threatened their life. Because of conscientious difficulties they retired from the China Evangelistic Society, which subsequently ceased to exist, and labored independently, trusting God to supply their needs. Their experiences of God's faithfulness in meeting his own personal needs and the needs of a hospital at Ningpo, of which he had taken charge, determined the character and purpose of his future work and the whole development of the China Inland Mission.

Invalided home in 1860, Mr. Taylor spent the next five years in England, finishing his medical course and also helping to complete the revision of a version of the New Testament in the colloquial of Ningpo, for the British and Foreign Bible Society. The fact that in a country containing a quarter of the world's population, eleven great provinces in inland China were spiritually as dark as night moved him deeply, and he was stirred to a deep sense of sin and shame of allowing such a state of affairs to continue. Yet appeals made to several mission boards in London on behalf of the neglected region brought only the disappointing reply that they were unable to undertake new work. Long continued, earnest prayer confirmed the conviction that a special agency was essential for the evangelization of inland China and that by simple trust in God such an agency might be raised and sustained without interfering with any existing work.

The time came when a decision had to be made, and Hudson Taylor realized it. Accept the divine call to carry the Gospel to inland China—then a closed land—he dared not; escape the call of God, he could not. "The feeling of blood guiltiness," he wrote, "became more and more intense. Perishing China so filled my heart and mind that there was no rest by day, and little sleep by night, till health broke down. At the invitation of a beloved friend I went to spend a few days with him in Brighton, in the south of England. One Sunday, unable to bear the sight of a congregation of a thousand or more Christian people rejoicing in their own security while millions were perishing for lack of knowledge, I wandered out on the sands alone in great spiritual agony; and there, unable to bear the conflict any longer, I surrendered myself to God for this service."

Not long afterward the first missionary party of fifteen was selected, and, as the time for their departure drew on, and the funds lacked, a daily prayer meeting was commenced on Feb. 6, 1866, to pray for from $7,500 to $10,000 as might be needful, to cover the cost of outfits, passages, etc. On March 21, six weeks afterward, more than $5,000 had been contributed in answer to daily prayer. On May 2, after a lecture on China at a village not far from London, given on condition that it should be announced upon the bills that there was to be no collection, Mr. Taylor received an offer from a firm of shipping agents, placing at his disposal all the passenger accommodations of the sailing vessel

Lammermuir. The chairman of the meeting, at which the lecture was given, who had urged Mr. Taylor to withdraw his objection to a collection also handed him a check for $2,500, saying that he had intended giving $25 to the collection, but had been so burdened during the night that he could not now give less than this larger sum.

Thus the way had been fully prepared, and on May 26, 1866, the Lammermuir set out on her long voyage with a missionary party numbering 22 in all. It was truly a venture of faith for those who went out thus, like Abraham, "not knowing whither he went," and to the leader the responsibility of leadership on such a scale was also an untried path. On Sept. 30 the party arrived safe and sound at Shanghai. Three weeks later the party started off in houseboats for the city of Hanchow, 200 miles inland, at that time necessarily a slow and tedious journey.

Space does not permit dwelling upon the progress of the work amid many severe trials, difficulties and hardships during these 65 years, and the records of the Mission are filled with striking incidents revealing the power of believing prayer as a means of protection from danger, guidance under difficulties and expansion in the face of new opportunities. In 1881-84 seventy additional laborers were given; in 1887 100 men and women were added to the force, and in successive years there has been a steady addition of new missionaries. Also the income of the Mission—though no solicitations of money have been made—has risen as steadily as the number of workers, so that through various experiences, the need at home and abroad has been supplied. It is a remarkable fact that no backward step has ever had to be taken for lack of funds.

At the present time the China Inland Mission's work has extended to sixteen provinces, with nearly 300 stations, and about 1,700 outstations, and is carried on by 1,162 missionaries, assisted by some 3,400 Chinese workers, over three fourths of whom are unpaid volunteers.

In 1888 Mr. Taylor, at the urgent request of many American friends of his work, made a brief visit to the United States, on his way back to China, speaking at Northfield and other places. In connection with this visit funds were offered for the support of eight new American missionaries who had volunteered for work in China. This number was increased to seventeen later and fourteen of these sailed with Mr. Taylor from Vancouver, B. C., on Oct. 5 of that year. During a second visit to this country in the following year, a permanent American base was organized, with headquarters at Toronto, Canada. During the next decade it became increasingly manifest that a home center would be needed in the United States as well as in Canada, and in 1900 a large and attractive house in Norristown, Penna., was offered; four years later, when this proved inconvenient, a friend gave the Mission a new home in Germantown, Philadelphia, where permanent headquarters have since been maintained at 235-237 School Lane. A monthly missionary magazine, China's Millions, is published separately on three continents, Europe, North America and Australia.

The constant pressure and increasing strain inseparable from such a rapidly growing work frequently threatened a serious breakdown; but Taylor, though far from strong as a child, manifested remarkable recuperative powers. In 1900, however, the first serious signs of failing health began to manifest themselves. Having already associated Dixon Edward Hoste with himself in the directorate of the Mission, he slowly resigned his great responsibilities, still seeking to assist the work as consulting director while living quietly in retirement in Switzerland. His second wife (nee Faulding),—his first wife had died in China July 23, 1870—to whom he had been married Nov. 28, 1871, and by whom he had two children, died in the summer of 1904. Early in 1905 Taylor determined, though extremely feeble, to pay another visit to China. After visiting various centers he reached Changsha, the capital of the previously anti-foreign province of Hunan, where he suddenly and peacefully passed from his labors. His remains were interred at Chinkiang, by the side of his first wife and those of his children who had died in China.

As a Bible student Taylor was unique. Holding firmly to the plenary inspiration of the Scriptures and putting them to daily test in his life and work, he became a most helpful and remarkable expositor, his Bible readings being greatly appreciated at the various conventions held in Europe and North America. As a leader of men and careful organizer he had preeminent gifts. Being convinced of his duty, every detail was carefully thought out and arranged for, and then no subsequent difficulty or opposition was allowed to daunt him. Gifted with the power to command sleep whenever needed, he labored night and day, resting only when exhausted nature compelled him. No day, however, was entered upon without a period of quiet prayer and Bible study. James Hudson Taylor was, to quote the words of Prof. Gustav Warneck, "A man full of the Holy Ghost and of faith, of entire surrender to God and his call, of great self-denial, heart-felt compassion, rare power in prayer, marvelous organizing faculty, energetic initiative, indefatigable perseverance, and of astonishing influence with men, and withal of child-like humility."

In the Land of Beginning Again

I wish that there were some wonderful place
Called the Land of Beginning Again,
Where all our mistakes and all our heartaches
And all of our poor, selfish grief
Could be dropped, like a shabby old coat, at the door,
And never put on again.

I wish we could come on it all unaware,
Like the hunter that finds a lost trail;
And I wish that the one whom our blindness had done
The greatest injustice of all
Could be at the gates, like an old friend that waits
For the comrade he's gladdest to hail.

We would find all the things we intended to do,
But forgot, and remembered—too late;
Little praises unspoken, little promises broken,
And all of the thousand and one
Little duties neglected that might have perfected
The day for one less fortunate.

It wouldn't be possible not to be kind
In the Land of Beginning Again;
And the ones we misjudged and the ones whom we grudged
Their moment of victory here
Would find in the grasp of our loving handclasp
More than penitent lips could explain.

For what had been hardest we'd know had been best,
And what had seemed loss would be gain,
For there isn't a thing that will not take wing
When we've faced it and laughed it away;
And I think that the laughter is most what we're after
In the Land of Beginning Again.

So I wish that there were some wonderful place
Called the Land of Beginning Again,
Where all our mistakes and all our heartaches
And all our poor, selfish grief
Could be dropped, like a shabby old coat, at the door,
And never put on again.

The Divine Spark

BY SUSAN HUBBARD MARTIN

From her seat on the front porch Marian Hood's attention was directed to a small figure toiling up the dusty road. It was a warm day with a blue sky overhead, but the fields, so green in springtime, were browned by the heat of August.

She had thought of going into the city that day, but had abandoned the idea. It was cooler in this spacious country home, with its trees, its shrubs, its fountains.

She thought with satisfaction as she sat there of a story that she had finished that morning. It was worth something after all to have the editors ask you, rather than do the supplicating yourself. Any way, she had served her apprenticeship with rejection slips and lean living. She had left behind the struggles of those early days and was out on the high road of successful authorship. The high road!

Once more her gaze wandered to the little figure approaching. She wondered idly who she was. Not a caller, for callers did not come so early in the afternoon. Moreover they did not come on foot. Her visitors rolled up in purring automobiles, and alighted languidly, because riding in them was no novelty. And this toiling woman looked shabby. Closer she came. Then Marian Hood saw that she walked with a cane. She was a small slight woman, shabbily dressed. While her face flushed with the exercise of walking, it nevertheless was thin and careworn. She came limping up the steps. There were dust streaks on her skirt.

"Good afternoon," she began brightly. "Am I right in surmising that this is the noted writer Marian Hood?"

Marian Hood nodded.

"Yes," she answered curtly.

The little lame woman beamed.

"How fortunate! I made the little journey here hoping you would be at home. I've just read your latest story, and I can't express how much I liked it."

Marian Hood relaxed a little. She could not help it. The admiration of the little shabby, lame woman somehow touched her heart.

"I determined to come to see you" went on the tired voice, "because I too want to write. But I didn't know to whom to send my story after I had written it. I hope I'm not asking too much, but I would be so grateful if you would give me the address of your editors."

"Sit down," commanded Marian Hood.

With a sigh of relief the little lame woman sank into a wicker porch chair.

"How lovely it is up here," she added. "So far away from the noise of the city. I live in a tenement. It is stifling there these hot days. I do plain sewing or anything that I can do. My name is Mary Dennison."

She paused.

"I hope you'll excuse me for coming in on you in this way. But I didn't know what else to do."

"Have you ever written before?" demanded Marian Hood.

"Oh, no" was the cheerful answer—"not for publication. I've written little verses for the children for my Sunday school class to recite in special programs. When Mrs. Adams in our church died I wrote a little "In Memoriam" of her. Every one said it was good, too. You see it is this way, our missionary circle is trying to get money to subscribe to the leper fund, and we have been asked to send a donation to the Door of Hope."

"The Door of Hope, what in the world is that?" asked Marion Hood inquiringly.

"It is a rescue home for Chinese girls," was the answer. "And so I just thought I'd write a story and give the money I earned writing it toward these two things. I would like to help buy our minister's wife a dining room rug too. The one they have is so shabby. And so I determined I would come to you first and ask you for your editors' addresses. Then I would send them the story."

Marion Hood, successful writer and keen analyst as she was, looked compassionately at the thin little figure in the wicker chair.

"Every one cannot write stories," she ventured.

The little lame woman smiled.

"I believe I can," she answered still brightly. "And how fine it is going to be when I sell it. I am especially interested in the leper fund. Think how we would feel if one of our loved ones was afflicted with it. It seems very far away as it is but it would not be so far away then."

"No," agreed Marian Hood, "it would not."

She touched a bell, and a maid appeared.

"Bring two glasses of iced tea and some cake," she said.

"Dear me, how delicious," ejaculated the little shabby woman, as she sipped the tea in the tall frosted glass. "This is about the biggest thing that has ever happened to me, seeing you I mean."

For reply Marian Hood handed her a sheet of paper.

"It has the addresses of my editors," she said.

"Has it?" cried the little lame woman. "Thank you! Thank you!"

"I would like to have your address too," said Marian Hood at parting.

She watched the little halting figure rise from the wicker chair.

"I must be going," said her visitor. "It is a long walk to the station."

All at once Marian Hood was struck by the most unselfish resolve that she had experienced for a long while.

"I'm going to drive you down," she said quietly.

It was weeks afterward.

At a certain tenement house in the city Marian Hood's automobile stopped.

"Wait here," she said to her chauffeur, "I'll not be long."

She glanced at the card in her hand.

"This must be the right number," she thought.

It was a shabby tenement in the most crowded part of the city. She walked up the first flight of dusty stairs. Then the second. With the card in her hand she stopped at a certain door and knocked.

"Come in," said a weak voice, and Marian Hood, exquisitely gowned, walked in.

In a chair banked with pillows sat the same little woman who had come to see her weeks before. The pale face lighted.

"Oh, it is you!" she cried, stretching out a thin little hand. "How pleased, how happy I am to see you! I have been sick with one of my spells, and this is the first day I have sat up. Take that chair there. I never dreamed that you'd come to see me."

Marion Hood took the chair.

"I came to ask you about your story," she began. "I was so interested in it, and I wanted to know all about the leper fund and the Door of Hope, and to inquire about the minister's wife's dining room rug."

The pale face regarding her flushed painfully.

"It—it came back, the story, I mean, and I was so discouraged and disappointed. I had planned on it, you know. I sent it to another place, but it came back again. I guess after all I can't write. I shall have to go on sewing and taking care of other people's children as long as I am able. It hurt me so to think I could not subscribe to the leper fund and the Door of Hope."

Marion Hood smiled.

"Let me tell you something," she said. "After you went away that day I wrote a story about you. It was accepted, and I have brought the money that they paid me. It is a gift to you. You are to spend it just as you see fit, and there is enough so that you may subscribe to the leper fund and the Door of Hope. You can even help on the dining room rug at the parsonage. Here it is—seventy-five dollars. You must take it, for I have plenty of money and do not need it. It was a real joy to me to write it for you, Mary Dennison. True, I can sell my stories, but you too have the divine spark. We are sisters, and as sisters I want you to have this."

Then she pressed into the feeble hand of Mary Dennison the money that would mean so much to her.

Mary Dennison was crying.

"The leper fund, the Door of Hope, the dining room rug at the parsonage are all possible," she whispered huskily. "Oh, 'the Lord bless you and keep you and make his face to shine upon you.'"

Marian Hood bent and kissed the pale cheek.

"Don't forget," she said tremulously, "to pray for me."—Watchman Examiner.

The Story of our National Park System

It is interesting to trace the national park system from its earliest history to the present time, and note how closely the movement parallels the general lines of development of a new country or civilization. For the following brief account we are indebted to Mr. Horace M. Albright, Director of the National Park Service, writing in the United States Daily.

First there was the unknown region of the Yellowstone, feared by natives of the surrounding country because of rumors of its peculiar workings of nature which to their simple minds could be the result only of the influence of evil spirits. Then there came the hardy adventurers and finally the Washburn expedition of 1870 which explored the territory and investigated its natural phenomena.

Next came conflict. Not the conflict with hostile neighboring tribe, feudal overlord, or powerful mother-country, such as all young peoples have faced, but with commercialization and selfish personal interests.

The explorers of the Yellowstone, after a month's investigation, were sitting around a campfire shortly before leaving the area, discussing what they had seen and what should be done with it. The suggestion was made that members of the expedition preempt title to the Falls of the Yosemite. Another suggested the geyser basins, while still a third advocated that each member of the expedition preempt a claim, all the holdings to be thrown into a common pool for the benefit of all.

So the vanguard of the army of commercialization was preparing to attack. But no young nation ever had a more valiant defender than the embryo park system in the person of Cornelius Hedges, a Montana lawyer.

After listening to the plans for partitioning the area, Hedges expressed his disapproval, strongly advocating that the whole area should be set apart as "a great national park"—the first time, so far as history shows, that these words were ever spoken. His suggestion met with an instantaneous and favorable response from all but one member of the party, and through their combined efforts in bringing the matter to Congress the Yellowstone Park was set aside by Congress in 1872 to serve as "a pleasuring ground for the benefit and enjoyment of the people."

Development followed. Logically, the material welfare of visitors to the region had to receive first consideration. For many years, therefore, the energies of the Government, aside from carrying out the duty of protecting the natural features of the park, as directed by Congress in the organic act, were bent toward providing wagon roads and trails, which with the accommodations furnished by outside interests took care of the creature comforts of the visitors. In the days when transportation was not so swift, all this took considerable time.

Gradually other parks were added to the system, and also national monuments, but the same rule held for them. It was not until after the motorization of the national parks' travel facilities, and of transportation generally, that the mundane needs were so well taken care of that attention could be directed toward a "higher culture" as we say of developing peoples. The visitors themselves, their physical needs supplied, began to question the why and wherefore of nature's world-building agencies.

The central government of the national park system meanwhile had been placed by act of Congress of 1916 in the hands of a new Bureau, the National Park Service of the Department of the Interior. After correlating the various parks and their methods of organization and development, this Bureau began to develop service to the public on a higher plane, and as early as 1920 instituted nature-guide and museum facilities.

These expanded rapidly and spread from park to park, until today it is generally acknowledged that the educational and inspirational uses of the parks, lead all others in benefit to our American people.

Perhaps the most popular form of educational or interpretative work in the national parks is the nature guide service, which, like the museum development, was initiated in Yosemite National Park in 1920 as a Government activity.

Previous to this, however, the late Enos A. Mills, proprietor of the Longs Peak Inn, adjoining the Rocky Mountain National Park, started one of the first private ventures in nature guiding undertaken in this country, and undoubtedly the first within a national park. To him also should go the credit for originating the term "nature guiding," describing this new form of educational work as "helping people to become happily acquainted with the life and wonder of wild nature."

Nature guide work, both in the national parks and throughout the country generally, is an outgrowth of popular interest in various phases of nature, and particularly in animals and plants. Casual questions of visitors to Summer camps, national parks, and other outdoor recreation areas emphasized to thinking people the desirability of having natural-history subjects explained in popular style by competently trained guides, and this eventually led to the establishment of nature guiding as it exists today.

In Yosemite Park, before the Government took up this work, a representative of the California fish and game commission, in connection with nature activities throughout the Summer resorts of California, gave a series of lectures and also offered field trips during which the lecturer explained the objects of interest encountered along the trail.

Former Director Stephen T. Mather, of the National Park Service, became so interested in the work that he arranged, in cooperation with the California commission, for the furnishing of free nature guide service in the Yosemite as a regular Government activity.

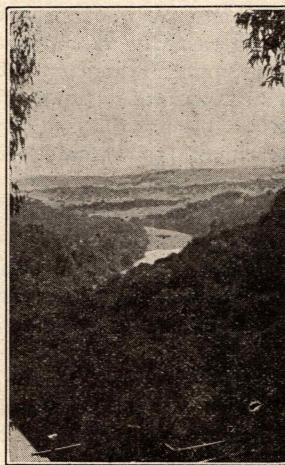

Popular acceptance of this new activity was so prompt and enthusiastic that it soon became an established unit of service to the public in Yosemite National Park and gradually spread throughout the system, until today it is available in all the major national parks and is handled by a corps of park naturalists and ranger naturalists. The nature guides usually are recruited from the universities of near-by States, either teachers or students trained in natural history subjects, so that the information given by them is always dependable.

The nature guide service is really divided into two sections, the lecture work and the personally conducted trips. The lectures are given in the hotels and lodges and around the campfire in the public automobile camps in the national parks, and also in several of the southwestern national monuments administered by the National Park Service.

In the personally conducted guide trips, parties are taken out on the park trails for periods of time varying from an hour or two to a day, and sometimes trips of several days or even a week are made. In the course of these trips the natural phenomena encountered along the way are explained in nontechnical language, and the questions of many tourists eager for information are answered fully.

The one difficulty in furnishing the latter type of service is that its popularity has made it difficult for the available guides to handle the great number of visitors desiring to make the trips. In an effort to supplement to a certain extent the personally conducted trips, a number of self-guiding nature trails have been laid out during the past three or four years.

While these have been very attractive to visitors, they have failed to relieve congestion on the personally conducted trips, for after using the self-guiding trips interest in natural history subjects is greatly stimulated and visitors are more keen than ever to attend the rangers' trips.

Iron, the King of Metals

Literature is full of thrilling stories of mankind's search for precious metals. We all like to read stories of the daring and the fortitude with which men have penetrated into the wilderness of the far corners of the earth in their hunt for gold, silver, platinum and other rare metals.

In comparison with these costly elements iron may seem like a prosaic and commonplace metal. Yet iron is the king of all metals; it is a blessing worth more to mankind than all the so-called precious metals combined. We could live comfortably without these "precious metals"; they furnish for the most part only the ornaments and luxuries of life.

Iron, on the other hand, is a vital and universal metal, upon which our very lives are dependent. Turn where you will, iron is ever-present; it supplies us with buildings and bridges and tools and machines. Without iron we could not exist, for it is this useful metal in our blood which carries the life-giving oxygen to supply us with energy. Let us consider this priceless metal for a few moments, and see whether its story will not give us some interesting things to think about.

Iron, besides being the most important of all metals, is also one of the most timid. It is forever striving to combine with other elements. It has a particularly great liking for oxygen; and as oxygen is present all about us in the air, we find that iron is continually in the process of combining with oxygen. The chemist calls this the formation of iron oxide; you and I in our plainer language say that the iron is rusting. Rust, you see, is nothing more or less than iron combined with oxygen.

The result of iron's strong liking for oxygen is that there is no metallic iron on earth except that which man has produced. The iron ore found in nature is for the most part in the form of iron oxide. It is iron which in the long ages preceding us has turned into iron-rust. Man with his great iron smelters and refining plants is continually busy at his job of unrusting this iron ore. The blast furnaces of the world each year release more than seventy million tons of iron from its union with oxygen. But this iron is constantly striving to leave us and get back to its original state; it is estimated that about fifteen million tons of iron turns back into rust each year, and is lost to us.

Absolutely pure iron is something which you and I have never seen. Only the chemist with his painstaking laboratory methods can catch a glimpse of it. It is a soft, ductile metal of almost the color of silver. But the instant it is exposed to the air its surface begins to turn dark. Soon it is almost black, and then gradually a coating of red rust appears. Truly, it is a timid metal!

The great value of iron lies in its versatility. It is in reality a dozen metals in one. By different processes and treatments it can be made either soft or hard, either brittle or malleable, either resistant or flexible. Steel is nothing more or less than iron with a tiny portion of carbon in it. The dozens of different varieties of steel with their differing degrees of strength and flexibility and hardness are made by varying the proportion of carbon that is mixed with the iron.

Then there is a host of rarer metals that can be mixed with iron to produce steel of special qualities. Thus the chemist produces vanadium steel, tungsten steel, chromium steel, manganese steel, and so on. These mixtures are so delicate that the variation of less than one percent of alloy makes a decided difference in the product.

For example, when a small percent of nickel is added to iron, the resulting steel becomes stronger and tougher as the percentage of nickel is increased. A mixture of twenty-five percent nickel and seventy-five percent iron produces quite a different metal, a metal which is rust-proof and non-magnetic. You can see how interesting this mixing of metals becomes. Iron and nickel are both magnetic metals; yet when they are mixed at this certain proportion they form a non-magnetic alloy. Steel containing twelve percent of manganese is so hard that it cannot be cut with metal drills, and hence it is used for making safes, battleship armor, and so on. The "stainless-steel" knives used in the kitchen are produced by putting twelve percent of chromium into the steel.

But let us talk no more about the practical and workaday aspects of iron lest we overlook the fact that iron has an aesthetic and artistic side. Yes, this black and prosaic-looking metal furnishes our world with much of its beauty. No metal can assume so many colors. Some iron compounds are orange; some are red; some are brown, green, blue, yellow, and black. Here is a metal which can catch all the colors of the rainbow.

As iron is so universally present in the crust of the earth, it is inevitable that its compounds should furnish much of the color that we see in nature. The bright-tinted rocks and sandstones of Yellowstone Park, the Grand Canyon and similar national landmarks owe their color to the iron compounds that they contain. The coloring of brick and terra-cotta comes from iron. The green foliage of summer and the gorgeous colors of the autumn leaves again we may trace back to the presence of iron in the leaves. Without iron the leaves and flowers would be white, our blood would not be red, but colorless. Surely iron has a right to claim to be the king of metals.—B. W. Elsom, in the Christian Endeavor World.

OUR CHURCH

A Survey and an Accounting

The Evangelical Synod of North America, "Our Church", today looks back upon a history of over ninety years. Much has happened in these years and many changes have been wrought, some of them due to our own growth and development, and some due to the changes in the world about us. It may pay us to stop for a moment and try to realize just what these changes imply.

Our church has grown from very small beginnings, from six pastors and one congregation on October 15, 1840 to over twelve hundred congregations and over eleven hundred pastors. In all the years our church has had a steady though by no means a phenomenal growth, which includes all departments of church life.

Congregational property which originally had a value of perhaps a few thousand dollars has grown to a value of forty million, synodical property has grown from nothing at all to a value of several million dollars as follows:

General Property, net value approximately.....	$3,000,000.00
Permanent Endowment of the Pension Fund	864,000.00
Eden-Elmhurst Advance, approximately	1,000,000.00

During this period we have developed, in addition, benevolent institutions which include four orphanages, six old folks' homes, two homes for epileptics and feeble-minded, and eleven hospitals, again representing an investment of many million dollars and rendering a service of great value not only to the members of our own denomination but to the communities in which they are placed and to the country at large.

Our publications of all kinds reach many thousands of subscribers and wield a very considerable influence for good. Our voice is heard in the councils of the churches and is heard with respect, and our influence in these councils is by no means inconsiderable.

This development proves that as our members have grown in wealth they have not forgotten their church but have given a portion of their possessions that the church might share the general advance in prosperity. The advance in wealth, however great it seems at first glance, does not compare with similar advances made by other denominations, and we are far removed from the position where increased wealth might reduce our spiritual initiative and the courageous presentation of the challenge of the gospel.

We have acquired, in the period of our history, two mission fields in India and Honduras. Both have shown a steady growth and the work has proven its worth according to the testimony of mission workers of other denominations as well as our own.

We have organized our lay people, the Brotherhood having 24,000 members, the Women's Union some 78,000 and the League, 27,000.

These organizations have contributed considerable to the spiritual strength of the church and to her material well-being.

Organized Sunday School work which was begun rather late in our history (1895) has been developed until today our religious educational organization compares favorably with that of other and larger denominations.

In organization, we have grown from the small church society, meeting in one conference annually, to a communion having twenty districts, meeting in biennial conferences with a General Conference meeting quadrennially and approximately 75 regional conferences meeting annually.

The work of the church at large is accomplished by ten administrative boards functioning under the General Council and the Board of Directors. Of these ten boards, two are functioning independent of the giving of the church, the Board of Publications and the Board of Endowment and Trust Funds. The work of the other eight boards is supported by the budget of the Synod which is determined each year by the General Council. In addition the administrative offices of the Brotherhood and Women's Union and Evangelical League have also a small share in the budget.

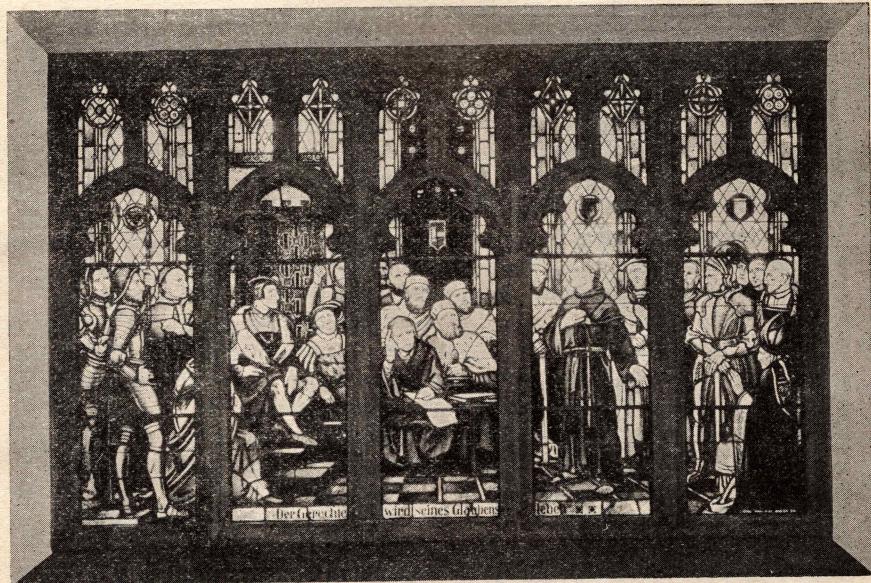

The greatest change, however, that the years have brought is the change in our system of higher education. Though our forefathers came from a country which placed a great emphasis on higher education and has a record in higher education which has the admiration of the world, circumstances compelled us to make the basis of our training for the ministry the standard established by the seminaries of the foreign mission societies rather than that of the great universities of Germany. Of late years the increasing standard of the general education in America and the increasing standard of the education of ministers of all denominations compelled us to consider raising our own standards. This led to the change of Elmhurst from a Pro-seminar, to a Junior, and then to a recognized A.B. College. Eden Seminary naturally fell into line and, building on the newer and higher foundation at Elmhurst, created an academic standard with the B.D. degree as a goal. The years will surely prove the wisdom of this change though it was not accomplished without serious misgivings and expenditures which were without precedent in our denomination.

Eden Theological Seminary

Eden Seminary has passed through three major stages of development. Established at Marthasville in the hills of Missouri in pioneer days, it trained ministers for a pioneer task in that simplicity of life which was the fundamental requirement of pioneer work. Far from the maddening crowd, encircled by Missouri's wooded hills, it fulfilled its task and fulfilled it well. But the end of the pioneer period brought to our church new and different tasks.

The growing membership, especially in the cities, made a more intimate contact with the world necessary for student and teacher alike, so the second seminary was built on St. Charles Rock Road just on the outskirts of St. Louis. Most of the leaders in the ministry of today call this second Eden their Alma Mater. But again the scene changed.

Memorial Window in Eden Library

The newer and higher standards required more classroom and the industrialization of the immediate surroundings made building on the old ground seem inadvisable. So a new property was acquired in Webster Groves, Missouri and in 1923 and 1924 our present seminary was built on this property on the corner at Lockwood and Bompart, covering twenty acres of ground. This was the greatest venture that to that day our church had ever undertaken and it raised for this purpose over $600,000.00, an unprecedented sum for our church. The new seminary is very beautifully located and the natural beauty of the tract has been very much enhanced by careful landscaping. As the property is located only a few blocks north of the three great highways leading through St. Louis: 40, 50, and 66, and can be reached without great loss of time by anyone touring either East or West, we want to encourage all our people to include a visit to Eden Seminary in their vacation tours.

But the beauty of the grounds and the buildings is not the most important thing about this beloved institution of ours. This is the school which trains our ministers, performing the most fundamental and most necessary task, for no church can live without a trained ministry. From Eden must come our preachers for our pulpits, missionaries for our home and foreign fields, and teachers for our schools and colleges, and from the ranks of its graduates we must recruit leaders for our administrative positions. All Evangelicals ought to be proud of the fact that Eden is meeting this challenge in such an able manner, and that its faculty is composed of sons of our own church who have won and deserve the confidence of all our members.

Eden has fine buildings in pleasant surroundings. It sets a high academic standard for its graduates. In every respect it tries to give to those who enter it as students the best that it can give. But with all these wonderful changes and advances, Eden retains and holds fast to the purity and simplicity of our spiritual heritage. To be a simple follower of the lowly Nazarene and an ambassador of the salvation He established is still the great ideal at Eden.

Financially, Eden is not as well situated as other schools of its kind. It still has an indebtedness of $150,000.00 which should be wiped out. It needs endowments for specific tasks which in this day of specialization we cannot avoid and it greatly needs enlarged library facilities, with eventually a special building to house its library. Let us hope that the spirit may move some man or men of wealth and vision to make these additions to the equipment of our beloved Eden.

Eden Seminary is supported from the budget of the Synod by a sum approximating $40,000.00 per year, surely a modest sum when we consider the importance of Eden and the work done there.

The president is Dr. S. D. Press, who will gladly supply more detailed information.

Elmhurst College

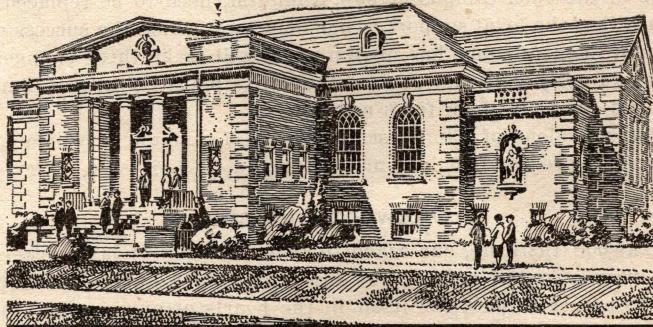

Elmhurst College as a school is somewhat younger than Eden Seminary. The two church bodies which in 1871 united to form the German Evangelical Synod of North America both had established schools for the training of teachers in parochial schools and for the preparation of men for the ministry. With the union of the two church bodies, these two schools were also united and became the Pro-seminary at Elmhurst. During its history as a Pro-seminary it has served a three-fold purpose. It prepared men for Eden; it trained teachers for our parochial schools, and it sent men into other walks of life as leaders, having given them a Christian viewpoint. It is surprising how many old "grads" of Elmhurst one can meet in various positions, and one will nearly always find a loyal member of the church.

During the early history of Elmhurst College students came almost exclusively from Evangelical homes and they came from practically every state in the Union. Consequently Elmhurst was to this older student body not merely a school, it was almost home to them, and inspite of the primitive conditions and the simplicity of life in those earlier days, the older graduates have a love for Elmhurst which is rarely equaled in our more modern times.

Many factors contributed to the newer tendency in education which endeavored to keep young men as near home as possible during their college years. These we cannot discuss in detail but it is only natural that this tendency was felt in Elmhurst. This tendency, together with the general rise of college standards and our own requirements for a higher standard were the principal reasons for the changes that of late years have taken place in Elmhurst.

In 1919, Elmhurst added sufficient courses to become a Junior College, but still kept its academy courses which were dropped in 1928. From that day on it steadily worked for the reaching of its goal, to become a full A.B. College. The Elmhurst-Eden Advance whose success is now assured, will accomplish this purpose by creating a sufficient endowment required by the North-Central Association of Colleges. The introduction of co-education in 1930 completed the change into a real modern college.

To sum up, Elmhurst has changed in three directions: first, in the academic standard of its curriculum; second, in the make-up of its student body; third, in the broadening of its function. These changes were inevitable, they had to come. One may regret them for sentimental reasons as one regrets having to change one's home; and such a tendency is very good, for we do not want to forget the old Elmhurst in the new. But neither do we want to slight the new Elmhurst because of our fondness of the old, for the most vital things have been preserved and it is well to call them to our mind. Elmhurst is still a Christian school. The closer one becomes acquainted with the faculty, with their ideals, their aims, and their methods, the more one becomes convinced that the Christian emphasis is never lost sight of.

Athletics play an important part and are necessary for an all-round life. The class may take most of the time, for the business of a college is to teach. But the dominant note is and must remain the spiritual emphasis, that neither athletic prowess nor eminent learning will provide a man without Christian character and high spiritual ideals. It is still a pre-theological school and will train those who are sent there for that purpose; it will do more and try to win young men with open minds to the ministry.

Financially, Elmhurst has worked under an even greater handicap than Eden Seminary, but the Elmhurst-Eden Advance whose goal is now in sight, should in a few years at its completion remove this handicap. Elmhurst's greatest immediate need, now that the endowment has seemingly been taken care of, is the replacement of some of the older buildings by more modern ones. It is perhaps easy to understand that in the middle of the last century the vision of our church was rather timid and did not dare look forward to the large campus which at present seems required. The old Music Hall which has been condemned as unsafe and the Commons, both standing square across the middle of the open campus at new Elmhurst, need to be replaced. We are sure that the loyal support of our members, which the success of the Elmhurst-Eden Advance has proven anew will make these changes possible at an early date and thus complete our plans for a new Elmhurst as we did complete them for a new Eden.

The president of Elmhurst is Rev. T. Lehmann to whom all requests for more detailed information should be addressed.

Oakwood Institute

Oakwood Institute, our school for the training of lay workers fulfills a very essential part of our educational task and will eventually make as secure a place for itself in the hearts of our members as did Eden and Elmhurst.

After being housed for six years in a mansion in Clifton, a residential suburb of Cincinnati, Oakwood Institute has been relocated in Mt. Auburn, about two miles nearer to the heart of the city, with the beginning of the 1929-30 school year. The location on East Auburn and Highland Avenues is very desirable for a training school. Street cars pass the campus and six lines offering quick transportation to any part of the city run within one block of the school. Oakwood is surrounded by various civic and educational institutions, Hughes High School, the Cincinnati University, the Conservatory of Music, Hospitals and Orphanages, etc., are within easy walking distance.

The students are accommodated in the main building where also the study and reading rooms are located. Many opportunities for valuable contacts for the enrichment of life are presented to the students.

September, 1931, will mark the ninth school year. In addition to Mrs. Howard F. Perrin, Director of the Hamilton County Daily Vacation Bible School who was head of the professional department the past year, Miss Esther Freivogel, M.A., a teacher in the Demonstration School of the School of Religious Education of Boston University for seven years has been added to the faculty. She also will serve as the acting dean until a new President has been called.

Evening courses for twenty weeks, two nights a week are offered. Last year these courses were attended by forty-two students. Oakwood facilities are offered to all our churches in the solution of Church, Week-day and Daily Vacation Bible School problems. Those who desire suggestions and help are urged to communicate with Oakwood.

Correspondence from prospective students is welcomed. Detailed information will be given gladly to anyone addressing Oakwood Institute, Highland and E. Auburn Avenues, Cincinnati, Ohio.

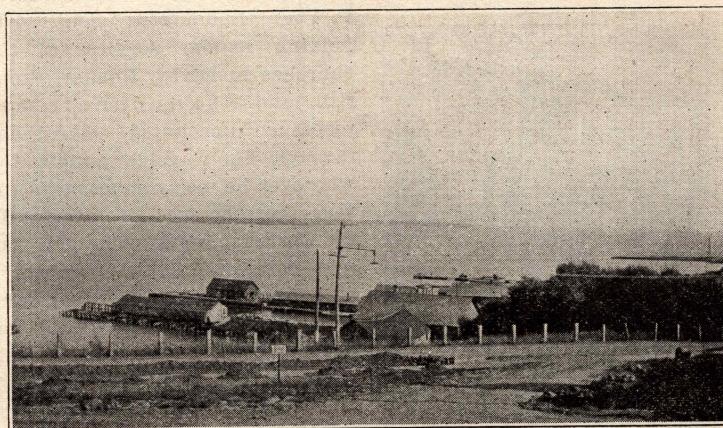

Home Missions

Since our church grew out of a definite missionary effort, it is only natural that missions and especially Home Missions were always near and dear to the hearts of our entire membership. Several districts have been won to our church through Home Mission efforts in the past: West Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado, Nebraska, Pacific North West, and California, and the churches in North and South Dakota, as well as many of the congregations in our large cities. Home Missions tripled the number of churches in St. Louis and more than tripled those in the city of Chicago. In other big cities the growth, while not quite as large, has also been considerable.

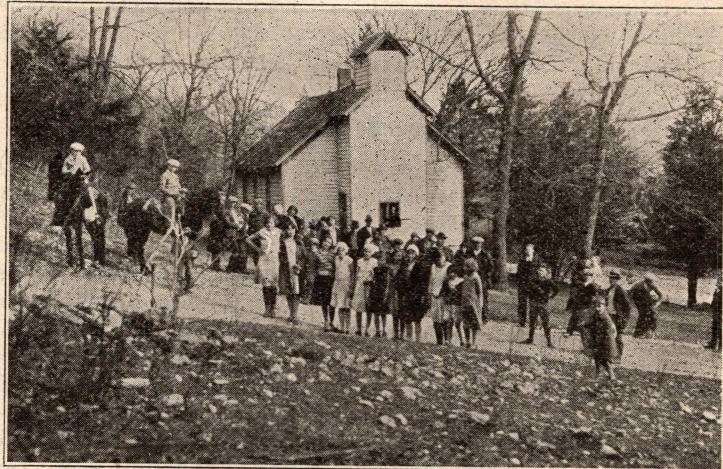

More than ten percent of all our pastors are engaged in Home Mission work, or a total of 111, all but five of these on full-time work. They serve 125 charges with over 10,000 members and more than 21,000 souls. Their Sunday Schools have an enrollment of more than 11,000; their church property is valued at close to $2,000,000.00 and they contribute more than $11,000.00 to our synodical budget.

Beside the regular work in Home Missions, i.e., the organization of new congregations in city and country and the gathering of the unchurched into worship groups and congregations, we have four special projects in charge of our Home Mission Board, namely: Biloxi, Madeline Island, the Ozarks, and the Seamen's Mission in Baltimore.

At Biloxi we work among those engaged in the oyster and shrimp fisheries, a class of people who because of the instability of their employment and the insecurity of their situation, would be unable to have a congregational life without assistance.

Madeline Island Seen from the Mainland

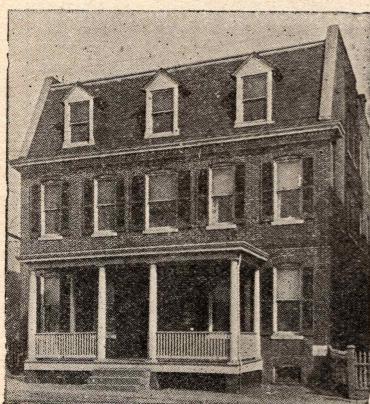

Sunday Morning in the Ozarks

Madeline Island is the largest of the Twelve Apostles' group in Lake Superior. It contains the oldest white settlement in the state of Wisconsin, founded by Father Marquette, and had a depot of the Astor Fur Company. The population is about evenly divided between Catholics and Protestants. As the size of the Island naturally limits the population a situation is there created which calls for extra effort on behalf of some Protestant denomination. With Biloxi this Island has fallen to us as our share among the great number of such special projects which our country has presented to the faith and vision of the Protestant church.

In our Ozark field which has been opened through the special effort of Brother Paul Wobus of Manchester, Missouri, the Reverend Z.

F. Yount is doing excellent work, holding regular services at the churches in Bixby, Bunker, Stone Hill, and Shannondale, and reaching uncounted multitudes through his wayside pulpit; for wherever he meets someone in the way, there he sees an opportunity for Christian work. The day may soon come when this Ozark work will bear richer fruit than any other enterprise into which we have entered.

The Immigrant and Seamen's Mission at Baltimore, according to the last report, had 765 names entered in their guest book during the year, an indication that there is still a good deal of work to be done by this old and beloved institution of ours.

The Home Mission work has for a number of years been supported out of the budget with an annual sum approximating $100,000.00. When distributed among the 122 Home Mission fields, this sum loses its impressiveness and seems barely adequate to the requirements. If our people would take the trouble to study Home Mission work and make themselves familiar with its many interesting details, special gifts would surely bring ample means for enlarging this work and meeting our challenge.

All correspondence on Home Mission work should be directed to Rev. J. J. Braun, Executive Secretary of the Board, 1720 Chouteau Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

Church Extension Fund

Closely allied with the Home Mission work is the Church Extension Fund which is a revolving fund of over $400,000.00 from which loans are made to struggling mission churches to help them secure a suitable property for their development. At present there are 174 loans on the books of the board controlling the fund, which are being repaid in semi-annual installments at a very nominal rate of interest.

All correspondence on the Church Extension Fund should be directed to Reverend Theo. Braun, Sr., chairman of the Board, 1511 College Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

Foreign Missions

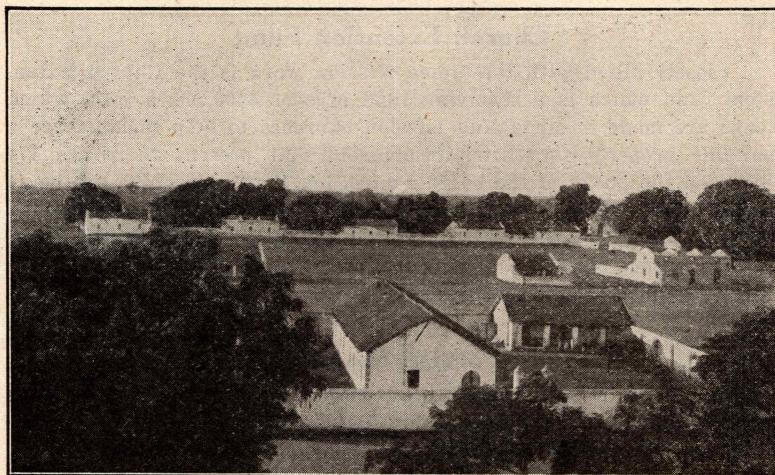

Of our two foreign fields, India is of course by far the oldest. There we have eight stations: Bisrampur, Raipur, Baitalpur-Chandkuri, Par-sabhadar, Mahasamudra, Sakti-Chandrapur, Khariar, and Tilda.

These with their ninety out-stations, 38 American missionaries (including those on furlough), five Indian pastors, and 345 native workers are bringing the message to a native population of about 2,000,000 souls. The congregations at these stations have a membership of 2,626 and the total number of the baptized is 4,508. In our primary schools there are over 3,000 pupils, in the middle school almost 500 pupils. These with our high school in Raipur give a total enrollment of over 4,000. Our orphanages and boarding homes at the last report had 639 inmates. Besides these institutions we have a home for the blind, and of course our Leper Institute at Chandkuri, the second largest in India. In our medical work treatment was given to more than 40,000 patients. The work is progressing in every respect and though there are as yet no signs of a mass movement there is a steady increase in the number of Christians which does not always show to full advantage because of the many Christians who leave our stations for work elsewhere.

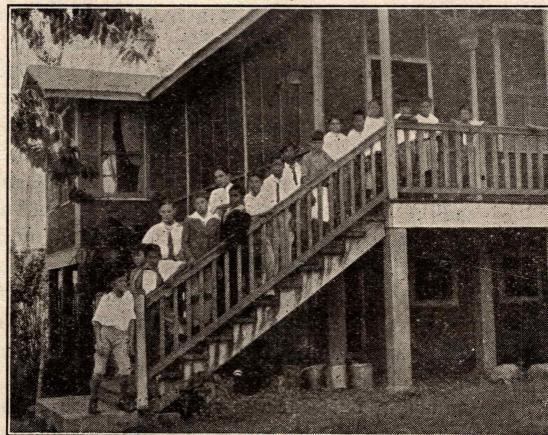

The names of our workers of whom all our members should think frequently and for whom they should pray are as follows:

Dispensary at Parsabhader,
India

Leper Asylum
Chandkuri, India

Boys' Boarding
School in Honduras

Dr. and Mrs. J. Gass, Rev. Theo. Seybold, Rev. and Mrs. C. Wahl, Miss Lydia Kies, Miss Hedwig Schaeffer, Rev. and Mrs. P. H. Konrad, Rev. and Mrs. E. Menzel, Rev. and Mrs. J. Schultz, Rev. and Mrs. M. P. Albrecht, Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Gass, Miss Elise Kettler, Miss Magdalene Kroehler, Rev. and Mrs. M. P. Davis, Mrs. H. Suger, Miss Adele Wobus, Rev. and Mrs. W. Baur, Miss Dorothy Riechers, Rev. and Mrs. H. A. Feierabend, Rev. and Mrs. A. F. Meyer, Miss Anna Schichi, Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Whitcomb, Sister Minnie Gadt; on furlough: Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Koenig, and Rev. and Mrs. T. H. Twente

In Honduras where now twelve of our workers are stationed, the work is centralized in San Pedro and Chamelecon. Besides the regular congregational and evangelistic work in these two centers a score of points are touched by out-of-town evangelization. Of these points, La Lima, Camp Number 10, and Puerto Cortez deserve special notice, and the work as a whole is heavy with promise for the future.

The names of our workers who should also be included in our prayers are as follows:

Rev. and Mrs. H. N. Auler, Rev. and Mrs. F. Andres, Rev. and Mrs. Walter Herrscher, and the Misses Anna Bechtold, Louise Kurz, Elise Goepfarth, Louise Vordenberg, Bertha Scheidt, and Sister Hulda Sturm.

Our foreign field has been supported for a number of years from the budget by a sum approximating $110,000.00, which would have been entirely inadequate if it had not been for special gifts by friends of our foreign mission work, who because of their great love and vital interest furnished sufficient additional funds to keep the work going.

Detailed information on our foreign mission work may be had from either Rev. Paul A. Menzel, D.D., executive secretary, 2951 Tilden St., N. W., Washington, D. C., or Rev. F. A. Goetsch, associate secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, 1720 Chouteau Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

Board of Religious Education

Anyone who has ever visited the headquarters of the Board of Religious Education in our synodical building has surely received a new vision both as to the amount of work that is done and as to the significance of this work for our entire denominational life. The work of the Board may be considered under three different headings: first, organization of the field for religious education; second, preparation and production of needed material; third, leadership training.

First: Under the guidance and with the assistance of the Board of Religious Education an ever increasing number of our Sunday Schools and churches are effectively organized for the task of religious education. Emphasis is constantly placed on the fact that religious education is the task of the entire congregation and not merely of a group within that congregation. For this reason attention is constantly called to the need for a Board of Religious Education in the organization of the congregation. Attention is also directed to the fact that the home, the Sunday School, Week Day and Vacation schools, and the confirmation classes must work in harmony and according to a preconceived plan, if religious education is to fulfill its task.

Second: In the preparation of material both the promotional and the editorial departments have served. The editorial department through the "Tidings," the "Light Bearer," "Girls' Friend," "Boys' Companion," and "Children's Comrade," keeps all the departments of the Sunday School in close and vital touch with the religious life of our day and especially of our denomination and tries to furnish the best lesson material available for our quarterlies. Three different types of quarterlies are being published: "The Bible Story Lessons," "The International Group Uniform Lessons," and the "International Group Graded Lessons". The promotional department on the other hand is concerned with the production of a Better Lesson Plan and a more effective curriculum. It calls attention to improved methods of teaching and to the best of educational helps which the teacher may secure, and in its Service Library gives access to the best in Sunday School literature.

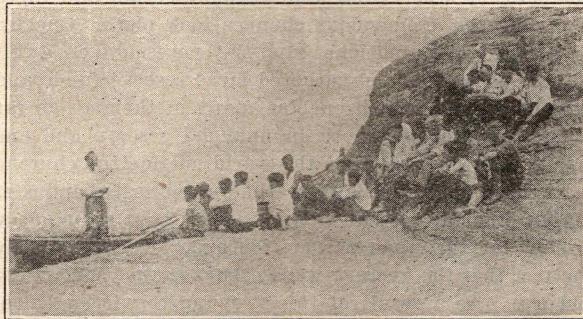

Third: The Board of Religious Education has fostered Teacher Training Classes both during the Sunday School period and on week days and gives definite recognition to those who have completed the course prescribed. It has held a number of institutes covering from one to five days in several Evangelical centers, and has increased the interest in the efficiency of teacher training in our congregations.

Its greatest and most lasting contribution to leadership training has without a doubt been made through the Evangelical Leadership Training Summer Schools and camps. There are eight such summer schools in: Elmhurst, Dunkirk, North Star in Minnesota, Sunflower in Kansas, Golden West in California, Gulf Coast in Mississippi, Lone

Girls' Camp at Lake Erie

Star in Texas, and Pacific North West in Washington. Besides these summer schools, boys' and girls' camps have been organized both in Dunkirk and Gulf Coast. Between seven and eight hundred young people attend these schools and camps annually. The influence thus exerted for developing future leadership in our church can hardly be overestimated. Since we have only the one college, the summer schools constitute one of our most important and effective means of bringing the religious influence to bear on young people of college age.

We must not forget to mention the department of Missionary Education in which the Board of Religious Education in cooperation with the two mission boards endeavors to provide a comprehensive and systematic program of missionary education for all departments of the Sunday School. This includes the preparation of suitable lesson material and the various efforts to interest both teachers and pupils in this material as well as in the general aspect of missionary education.

For detailed information write to the Board of Religious Education, 1720 Chouteau Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

Board for Pension and Relief

When our present Pension System was inaugurated in 1910 and during the four years following was completely organized and made effective, our denomination proved to be, as far as vision at least is concerned, far ahead of the other Protestant denominations. So much so was this true that serious doubts were entertained as to the possibility of carrying out the conceived plan. Due credit must always be given to the leaders of that time that inspite of the many obstacles they courageously proceeded to carry out the provisions of this plan and did succeed in building up a worthwhile pension system.

These twenty years have seen a tremendous growth. In 1910 the Board for Pension and Relief took over a reserve of $6,500.00. This sum in twenty years has grown by careful saving, investment, and a special campaign into a fund slightly in excess of $850,000.00 and the amount now paid out in pension and relief each year is approximately $110,000.00.

In the meantime the world did not stand still during those twenty years, and both in other Protestant denominations and in the world outside the churches, tremendous changes took place. One by one the great Protestant denominations saw the necessity of a thoroughly up-to-date pension system and gathered large reserve funds and worked out systems of support which enabled many of them to go far beyond what we had accomplished both in financial reserve and amounts of pensions paid. At the same time the world outside the churches gradually came to the conviction that our whole complicated industrial structure could not be made permanently secure without some adequate pension provision for the wage earner, for experiences had convincingly proven the fact that the average wage earner cannot adequately provide for his old age. As a result of this growing conviction, many of the large industries, especially the railroads, have likewise worked out pension systems which in their conception as well as in their practical application are considerable ahead of the provisions in our own pension system. So with due respect for all that has been accomplished, we must face the fact that we have lost the rather envious position of being the leaders in this great and important movement.

This situation should challenge us that we may not rest content with our present accomplishments but make our plans for still greater advances and bring what genius our church may possess for planning and execution to bear on the problem of developing a fully adequate pension system which will be in accord with the accomplishments of other churches as well as those of the industrial world. For the church of Jesus cannot afford to lag behind when it comes to matters involving an equitable adjustment of life's difficulties on a moral basis, and the world has long conceded that a pension for the wage earner is not only equitable and just but is absolutely needed for the moral justification of our whole industrial system.

All correspondence in connection with the Board should be addressed to Rev. Theo. Oberhellmann, at 1720 Chouteau Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

Evangelical Brotherhood

The Evangelical Brotherhood is the national synodical organization of men's work in our Synod. It includes men's societies of all kinds; also men's Bible classes.

The 1930 statistics show 463 men's organizations with a membership of 24,436. (Not including men's Bible classes).

The activities of the Evangelical Brotherhood are Religious Education, promotion of Family Devotions, Evangelism, Missionary study, Christian Stewardship, Boys' Work and Social Service.

The "Monthly Activity Program" is published for use in the monthly meetings. This contains both an educational and activity program.

Individual Brotherhoods are organized into local Federations and District Federations. There are seven of the latter and seventeen of the former. These meet quarterly or annually. A national convention is held every two years.

"Evangelical Men" is published monthly. Only 25 cents a year. Send for a copy.

The object of the Evangelical Brotherhood is: To unite Christian men for larger Kingdom service in the congregations, community, denomination, and world at large by means of solidarity, study, supplication and support.

Our slogan: "Evangelical men for the Man of Galilee".

Write headquarters at 1720 Chouteau Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri, for literature and further information.

Evangelical Women's Union

The Evangelical Women's Union is the women's organization of the Synod and every women's society is considered a member and entitled to its services. It was organized June 30, 1921. Its aim is to enlist all Evangelical women in the promotion of the whole program of the whole church.

Therefore its activities include Christian Education, Religious Work, Missionary Education and Support, Christian Stewardship, Social Welfare and Christian Citizenship.

In 1930 figures show 1295 societies with a membership of 78,307. These are organized into 34 local federations and 11 district unions, one in India. The district unions meet once a year; the federations monthly, quarterly, or semi-annually. Over 150 such meetings or conventions are held annually.

A national convention is held every four years. The last at Detroit in 1929 had 2,000 delegates and visitors, the largest convention ever held in the Synod. In the intervening years an "Officers' Conference" is held.

A "Monthly Program" is published for the monthly meetings of societies which contains both an educational-inspirational and work program for each month. Send for a copy (2c).

The Women's Union promotes five annual projects: Day of Prayer for Missions on Ascension Day, the Thank-Offering which supports some form of synodical work, World Friendship among Children, reading or studying of two mission books and Church Paper Week. In 1930, 2,250 new readers of our church papers were secured.

During the first ten years the Women's Union contributed over $100,000.00 toward synodical support.

Write headquarters at 1720 Chouteau Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri for literature and further information.

Evangelical League

The Evangelical League which is our young people's organization and bears this name since the convention in St. Louis in 1912, has its own secretary whose office is under the joint control of the Board of Directors of the Evangelical League and the Board of Religious Education since much of our young people's work is very naturally of an educational nature.

The League at present has a membership of approximately 27,000, is holding its conventions quadrennially, and conventions in the districts and smaller federations annually.

The League fostered and supported the building of the Memorial Library at Elmhurst, and under its direction the work among the Evangelical students at the various universities and colleges of this country is being carried on. It fostered the building of the Student Chapel at Columbia, Missouri and will complete this venture in the near future.

The executive secretary is Reverend O. P. Schroerluke, who will gladly give detailed information to those applying at his office at 1720 Chouteau Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

Charitable Institutions

Our four orphanages at Hoyleton, Bensenville, St. Louis, and Detroit provide home surroundings and a good education for about 483 orphans, employing in this work 62 people.

Our old folks' homes at Buffalo, Bensenville, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, San Antonio, and Detroit provide a home for 247 men and women in their old age, employing for this task about 25 helpers.

The two Emmaus Institutions for Epileptics and Feeble Minded at Marthasville, and St. Charles have 220 inmates and 25 employees, and we may be proud of the fact that these two institutions are very unique, in fact the only ones of exactly their type and character in the United States, performing one of the most difficult and thankless tasks in the world with a devotion that is truly astounding. All these institutions are supported chiefly by the Evangelical congregations in the immediate neighborhood, though the two Emmaus Institutions draw their support from the entire denomination.

In addition we have 11 hospitals. At St. Louis the new hospital which has just been completed at a cost of $1,000,000.00 and dedicated lies in a wonderful location just off Forest Park, and with a very modern and complete equipment is making a worthwhile contribution to the relief of suffering in the city and neighborhood of St. Louis.

Cleveland has likewise completed its new hospital just a little while ago and is looking forward to increased service and influence.

Chicago, Detroit, Evansville, Milwaukee, Baltimore, and Kansas City likewise have new and well equipped institutions and are in flourishing condition.

The other hospitals at Lincoln, Illinois, Faribault, Minnesota, and Marshalltown, Iowa are situated in small towns. This makes their task slightly different from that of the other hospitals which are located in large cities. But they are making a very valid contribution to Christian charitable enterprises and have the confidence of the Evangelicals within their territory and in the church at large, and are looking forward to increased service and influence.

These hospitals represent a capital investment of approximately $6,000,000.00; their budgets run to $1,500,000.00; they employ over 1,000 people and take care of approximately 40,000 patients a year.

In addition to the above named institutions we have a Home for girls in Milwaukee, a Convalescent Home in Rochester, Minnesota, and a hospital in Cincinnati which is supported jointly by our churches and the churches of the Reformed Church in the United States.

The Administration

Two fundamental causes led to the development of our administrative department from the very simple organization of 25 years ago to the more complicated but also more efficient organization of our day.

The first of these is the increasing amount of work required of all synodical officers which made it necessary for these officers to be employed on full time, and the other, the increasingly heavy program of work of the local pastor who is no longer able to give spare time to the administration of synodical affairs.

It also soon became apparent that the synodical offices could not be very well administered in a spare room in someone's home, and so very naturally we came to the thought of creating somewhere a synodical headquarters with sufficient office space for all our administrative departments. This dream was realized when the Brotherhood men of St. Louis and South Illinois offered the sum of $10,000.00 for the purchase of a suitable building. On the basis of their gift, the Synod House at 2013 St. Louis Avenue was acquired and synodical headquarters were established there. For a period of 10 years the synodical offices were housed in this building, until finally only the Home Mission office was still in other quarters. These 10 years, however, showed quite plainly that the old building was not entirely adequate to our needs. It was wasteful in space and not economic in upkeep as we learned by experience and could learn in no other way. When therefore it was necessary to erect a new building for Eden Publishing House, the General Conference in Rochester in 1929 authorized the addition of an extra floor to this building with suitable offices for all the departments of our administration. This plan was carried out and in April of the year 1931, the synodical offices were removed from 2013 St. Louis Avenue to the new location in the new Evangelical Synod Building at 1720 Chouteau Avenue. There we have sufficient space for all our offices, due to a careful utilizing of all space, and a much greater economy in up-keep as the years will show.

If you take the elevator to the fourth floor of this new building and enter the long hall from the lobby, you will find in suite 401 the offices of the Board of Religious Education, Mr. A. R. Keppel, executive secretary, and Rev. Theo. C. Braun, Jr., assistant secretary. As you walk down the hall you will find in room 403 the office of the Board for Pension and Relief, with Rev. Theo. Oberhellmann in charge. Adjoining his office you will find the office of the General Council, rooms 404 and 405, Rev. H. P. Vieth, executive secretary. On the same side of the hall and just adjoining, in suite 406 are the offices of the treasurer of the Synod, Mr. F. A. Keck, and next to him in suite 407, the most quiet and therefore most desirable location of the building, will be found the offices of Dr. C. W. Locher, president of the Synod. Across the end of the hall, just at the turn, the offices of the Board for Home Missions are housed in suite 408, where the new executive secretary, Rev. J. J. Braun is busy with the affairs entrusted to him. Coming back up the hall on the opposite side is found first of all a committee room which is available for all needing such a room for meetings. The door bearing the number 412, adjoining the committee room leads to the offices of the Board of Foreign Missions with Rev. F. A. Goetsch in charge. Adjoining this office are the two wash rooms and a small storage room. In suite 414, will be found the offices of the Brotherhood and Women's Union, Rev. H. L. Streich, executive secretary and Mrs. E. Reichenbach, assistant secretary. Room 415 is a room used by all the offices for the housing of such office machinery as we use in common. One office only is placed on the 5th floor, a small section of which had to be finished because of the elevator requirements, and that is the office of the Evangelical League, Rev. O. P. Schroerluke, executive secretary. The whole arrangement is practical, economic, and will mean, in the years to come, greater efficiency and coordination of the various departments.

The Budget and Finance

The chief source of revenue for the work of the church lies in the voluntary giving of our congregations. Voluntary giving is such giving as knows no other compulsion than the inner compulsion of the love of Christ. It is inconceivable that anyone who has experienced the saving grace of God in Jesus Christ should fail in willingness to share that experience with the world and to support any enterprise looking towards the realization of the Kingdom of God. But all giving needs guidance that our sacrificial spirit may set for itself a goal to make our giving adequate to the task before us, and to distribute the burden on an equitable basis. It is the purpose of the budget to give such guidance, for the budget is not a tax for the support of an institutionalized church but rather a challenge to our giving to make our gifts measure up to the task set by God and to equalize the weakness of some by the strength of others. The budget comes to a congregation in the form of a quota which constitutes the rightful share of a congregation in the larger Kingdom work of the church as correctly as it can be ascertained. There seems to be only one proper way to meet this challenge and that is with the question "What can we do to meet it?" Any congregation which, compelled by the love of Christ, seriously undertakes to meet the Kingdom challenge presented in the budget, must inevitably grow spiritually until it measures up to the task.

The budget comes to the individual in the form of a per capita. There is only one way for the individual Christian to meet this per capita and that is with the question: "Considering my income, how many times can I give the per capita sum in order to measure up to the Christian ideal?" We must never forget that there are always some who cannot give, there must therefore be others who give double and triple the amount required in order to reach the goal.

Endowments and Annuities

Though the budget is the chief source of revenue for the Kingdom program of the church, there are other sources which must be considered. Endowments are funds invested in such a manner that only their interest may be used for the program of the church. They come either as the gifts of living donors who because of their faith and their interest in special Kingdom projects set aside a given sum as an endowment gift to the cause they love, or they come from the estates of wealthy Christians who before their death remembered their church in their Last Will and Testament. Wealth undoubtedly entails an obligation for larger gifts for Kingdom purposes and it is the duty of the church to present this obligation with all the power at its command. This source of revenue if rightly handled could and should ease the burden of the regular budget.

When special gifts over and above the budget obligation are given not for permanent investment but for immediate use in any of the departments of church work we call them designations and classify them as such.

Annuities represent another source of revenue. Annuities are actual gifts by living donors given with the condition that during the life-time of the giver the income from the money is to be paid them and only at his death can the church dispose of the gift. This is a way in which elderly people of small or moderate means may help their church in a very real way. Their life savings can be handled by the church with much greater security and a great deal less trouble to the giver. He has his income during his life-time and knows that at his death his savings will serve a greater purpose in the Kingdom of God. Either the former treasurer, Rev. H. Bode at 1740 N. Euclid Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri, or our present treasurer, Mr. F. A. Keck at 1720 Chouteau Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri will be glad to give detailed information regarding this important matter.

It is our hope that this little survey of our church will induce you to ask the question of yourself very seriously, "What have I done as my share in the up-building of this denomination and through it of the Kingdom of God which it serves?"

THE COMMITTEE ON PROMOTION
H. P. Vieth, Executive Secretary.

Legacies and Foundations

From September 1, 1930, to September 1, 1931

1. Henrietta Dengler Nagel, Rochester, N. Y., for Syrian Orphan Home, $50; Home Mission, $25; Foreign Mission, $25.00	$ 100.00
2. Wm. Burkle, Ackley, Iowa, for Home Mission, $200, Foreign Mission, $200; Deaconess Hospital, Marshalltown, Iowa, $50; Emmaus Institutions, $50	500.00
3. Caroline Doernenburg for Eden Theological Seminary....	2,000.00
4. John G. Weigle for Evangelical Synod	500.00
5. Miss Elise Jenter, Ann Arbor, Mich., for Foreign Mission, $50; Home Mission, $50.00	100.00
	$3,200.00

The above list of bequests is quite brief as compared with other years; nevertheless I am happy to be able to report an additional bequest. Miss Bertha Hasse, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, has bequeathed a parcel of real estate in Milwaukee to various boards and institutions of our Synod. Since this property has not yet been sold and exact figures are therefore not available, this bequest has not been included in the above list.

The Synod is very grateful to these departed friends who have thus evidenced their love for the Evangelical Synod, to the work of the Kingdom and to our institutions of charity.

God grant that many may follow their noble example in their devotion to their Lord and to his Kingdom.—F. A. Keck, Treasurer.

Bequests, Legacies, and Annuities

There is a difference between these terms which should be more clearly recognized. Bequests and legacies represent a division of property or chattels in one's last will and testament, instructing the administration or executor under court supervision to make the division in the manner set forth in the will. An annuity represents an outright gift, with the provision that semi-annually a stipulated interest is paid the annuitant during life time, and that at death the principal be turned over to the legally authorized representatives of the cause mentioned in the annuity contract.

Bequests and legacies provided for in wills are frequently contested and often broken and therefore uncertain in their final result, while inheritance taxes, attorney's fees, and other expenses may greatly diminish the amount the testator desired to give. An annuity on the other hand gives the assurance that the donor's wishes will be adhered to and that his gift will be used undiminished by any expenses. In addition he receives interest on the principal during his lifetime, nor is he obliged to pay taxes on the principal, or worry about investing or reinvesting, or the loss of principal due to unfortunate investment, and enjoys a regular and dependable income to the last days of his life.

Any one who has property or possessions owes it to himself, his family, the community, and God's Kingdom, that he make provision for the disposition of his possessions either by will or annuity. Some of our wealthiest people have disposed of their possessions during lifetime, reserving for themselves only the income, in other words, they have adopted the annuity form of disposition. Where this is not desirable, a will is the only alternative. The Kingdom causes in either case should receive due consideration. The General Treasurer, 1720 Chouteau Ave., St. Louis, Mo., will gladly furnish further information.

Form of Bequest

Evangelical people desiring to make a bequest in favor of the Evangelical Synod of North America, or any one of its boards or institutions, should be careful to do this in the manner prescribed by law. Where several boards or institutions are to be remembered, a separate paragraph beginning "I give and bequeath," etc., should be made for each. The following form is suggested where no lawyer is available for counsel.

"I give and bequeath to the (Evangelical Synod of N. A., of which Mr. F. A. Keck, St. Louis, Mo., is treasurer), (German Evangelical Missouri College [Eden Seminary] located at Webster Groves, Mo.), (Pro-Seminary of the Evangelical Synod of N. A., located at Elmhurst, Ill.), (Board for Home Missions of the Evangelical Synod of N. A.), (Board for Foreign Missions of the Evangelical Synod of N. A.), (Board of Trustees for the Church Extension Fund of the Evangelical Synod of N. A.), (Board for Ministerial Pension and Relief of the Evangelical Synod of N. A.), the sum of dollars and the receipt of the treasurer thereof shall be sufficient evidence for the discharge of my executor."

The will should be attested by three witnesses (in some states only two are required) who should write opposite their names their places of residence, (in cities, the street and number). The following form of attestation will answer for every state in the Union: "Signed, sealed, published, and declared by the said (name of testator) as his last will and testament, in presence of us, who at the request of the said (name of testator), and in his presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses." Some states require the will to be made at least two months before death.

Any information concerning such legacies or bequests should be communicated to the General Treasurer, Mr. F. A. Keck, 1720 Chouteau Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

CHURCH REGISTER

List of congregations served by pastors of the Evangelical Synod of North America. Those designated with * are not in formal membership with the Synod. The name of the town or city is given first, then that of the congregation, and finally that of the pastor. Corrected to October 30, 1931.

The † indicates that the post-office address of the pastor differs from the name of the place here given. Look up the pastor's address in the clerical register pages.

German Protestant Orphans' Home

8240 St. Charles Rock Road

St. Louis County, Mo.

Telephone: Wabash 140

Our Home, founded in 1858 by the late Rev. Edw. L. Nollau, was incorporated under its present name in 1861. During the 73 years of its existence 4,691 children have been provided for.

In our Home our children not only receive food and raiment, but also a Christian training and an education to properly prepare them for life. "We believe in Equality of Opportunity."

Eighty percent of our maintenance is charity, and we warmly recommend this worthy cause to the liberal support of our friends.

Applications are filed at the Home Office with the superintendent. All applications must undergo social investigation and are then considered by our Board of Directors for acceptance.

OUR BOARD: Mr. Wm. G. Mueller, Pres.; Mr. George C. Diederich, Vice-pres.; Mr. Theo. Wetterau, Sec.; Mr. Herman C. Kralemann, Treas.; Mr. Fred Stille; Mr. Wm. Esselbruegge; Rev. Theo. Haefele; Rev. J. N. Schuch; Mr. Phil. Schmidt. Mr. and Mrs. Herman H. Helmich, Supt. and Matron.

Souvenir booklet of the Home will be mailed on request.

All freight and express should be addressed: German Protestant Orphans' Home, c/o Wm. G. Mueller, 2nd and Washington Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

The German Protestant Home for Orphans and Old People

West Grand Boulevard

Detroit, Michigan

Our orphans' and old people's home is situated in one of the most beautiful sections of Detroit. We cordially welcome Evangelical people who may come to Detroit to visit our institution. A Grand River Car to West Grand Boulevard will bring them right to the home.

The home is under control of the Michigan and Ohio Districts of our Evangelical Synod and is dependent upon friends within our Church for its support.

Our home is able to accommodate 125 children and 35 to 40 old people. Due to the great advanced prices of past years the conduct of our institution is dependent more than ever before upon the generosity of our friends in the Synod.

We cordially solicit your interest and express our gratitude to the many friends who have heretofore supported us.

Bequests must be made in favor of "German Protestant Home for Orphans and Old People, c/o Mr. Chas. Riebling, Treasurer, 1433 Baker St., Detroit, Mich." Other contributions will be gratefully received by the superintendent, Rev. F. Lueckhoff, 1852 W. Grand Blvd., Detroit, Mich. Phone: GARFIELD 8800.

The Evangelical Home for Children and Aged

Bensenville, Illinois

History

This Home dates its history from October, 1893. During 1927 a new home was built for children and in 1928 the old home was remodeled for aged men and women, giving us a present capacity of 110 children and 50 aged. This Home depends upon about 75% benevolence and, therefore, must be classed as a benevolent institution, which is needy and worthy of the liberal support of benefactors.

Applications

Applications, monies and provisions may be sent direct to the home, Rev. William C. Krause, Superintendent and Financial Secretary.

The Board

The Board consists of the following members: Rev. R. B. Fiedler, President; Rev. F. W. Schroeder, Vice-president; Mrs. John A. Michel, Secretary; Mr. W. C. Olhaber, Treasurer; the Revs. A. N. Mayer, E. H. Plassmann; Messrs. A. C. Dittmann, G. Ewert, W. J. Katzberg, Wm. Stauber, Emil Krueger, Mrs. A. Bromann.

These institutions offer Christian homes to epileptics, feeble-minded and noisy, childish old people, irrespective of sex, creed, or nationality.—The annual fees are $300 for a bed in the wards, $600 for a private room, payable three months in advance.—They are charitable institutions, nevertheless, as many are being cared for who cannot pay these fees or who are able to pay only part of them. The Board appeals to all friends of the unfortunates and poor to assist in taking care of these by personal help, if possible, or by liberal contributions which may be sent to:

Mr. F. A. Keck, 1720 Chouteau Ave., St. Louis, Mo., or Rev. C. F. Sturm, Supt., Marthasville, Mo., or Rev. Theophil Stoerker, Supt., St. Charles, Mo., or Rev. E. L. Mueller, Treasurer, R. R. 3, Clayton, Mo.

"He that hath pity on the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will He pay him again."—Proverbs 19:17.

The Evangelical Deaconess Home and Hospital

6150 Oakland Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

Telephone, Hiland 8510

is a training school and home for Evangelical deaconesses and deaconess nurses who desire to serve the Lord in the sick, poor and aged, especially those in our Evangelical churches, in the spirit of Jesus Christ, and whose motive is that of gratitude and love. Our greatest need is more Evangelical Deaconesses who serve in Christian mercy. Intelligent young women and widows between the ages of 20 and 36 years, with good health, a high school education, and good character, are eligible for admission, and are urgently requested to enter the deaconess work.

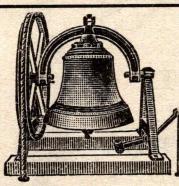

The Hospital has a staff of very able physicians and surgeons, and nurses patients at the current prices. Poor patients are taken care of free of charge. If possible, deaconesses are sent out into families to care for the sick poor.
